Capture of the Robert and Minnie,

Taken off San Pedro Harbor and Towed into That Port.

Rumor That the Itata is Disabled off Catalina Island.

Pilot Dill and Supercargo Burt Arrested-They Say the Itata Has Salled South with the Arms.

By Telegraph to The Times.

SAN PEDRO, May 9 .- | Special.] The schooner Robert and Minnie was seized this afternoon by United States Deputy Marshal N. O. Anderson, three or four miles off the entrance to the harbor, and is now lying at the wharf here in charge of officers. The schooner was sighted about ten miles out, this afternoon, coming up from below, she having been recognized by people here who are familiar with Deputy Marshal Anderson having put off in the tug Falcon, found the Robert and Minnie under full sail to the northward. She tried to get away, but the tug soon overhauled her, and Deputy Marshal Anderson and members of his party boarded her and hard sound the supposed that he was looking for the man from the Robert and Minnie under full sail to the northward. She tried to get away, but the tug soon overhauled her, and Deputy Marshal Anderson and members of his party boarded her and the supposed that he was looking for the man from the Robert and Minnie under full sail to the reporter application and, introducing himself, informed the stranger that he supposed to meet a whole was looking for the man from the Robert and Minnie under full sail to the man from the ready reply. The reporter applogized and, introducing himself, informed the stranger that he had expected to meet a Mr. Burt from San Pedro, when, to his surprise, the gentleman said, "There is no such man, sir," and proceeded to inform the interviewer that he supposed that he had expected to meet a man, sir," and proceeded to inform the interviewer that he supposed that he had expected to meet a man, sir," and proceeded to inform the interviewer that he supposed that he had expected to meet a man, sir, and proceeded to inform the interviewer that he supposed that he had expected to meet a man, sir, and proceeded to inform the interviewer that he supposed that he was looking to the man from the first that he was looking the supposed th brought her into the harbor, arriving here at 5 o'clock, when the vessel was tied up to the wharf. The crew offered no resistance to the seizure.

It appears that the object of the schooner in coming to San Pedro was to put ashore Agent Burt and Pilot Dill. It is learned from them and others on the schooner that she trans-ferred her arms and ammunition to the Chilean steamer Itata at a point south of San Clemente Island, and in American waters. The Itata then turned about and steamed southward.

Burt and Dill confirm the report that and he must not interfere.

Burt and Dill both state that if any vessel tries to chase the Itata, the pursuer will have a lively time of it. Burt at once left by team for Los Angeles to take the night train to San Deputies Tarble and Jenkins are in charge of the Robert and Minnie her crew.

Pilot Dill is now under arrest. Burt is to be arrested in Los Angeles.

A STARTLING RUMOR. The Itata Sald to Be Disabled Off

SAN PEDRO, May 9. — [Special.]— Great excitement has prevailed in San Pedro since the capture of the Robert and Minnie by Deputy United States Marshal Anderson with the steamer Falcon at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The Falcon has been kept under a full head of steam and is evidently preparing for the sea. The hurried and mysterious movements of all engaged have attracted a large crowd about the wharf. A numor, not yet traced to a reliable source, spread like wildfire among the crowd, that the Falcon, with a deputy United States marshal and possé, would go to sea early in the night with a view of capturing the Itata, said to be disabled off Catalina. Some confirmation of this rumor may be found in the fact that exactly at 9:30 o'clock a team dashed up to the wharf, and a number of men boarded the Falcon, which immediately went to sea. [Up to the hour of going to press this morning no confirmation of the above rumor about the Itata has been received.—ED.]

IN THIS CITY.

Some Sensational Developments— Arrest of Supercargo Burt, The capture of the Robert and Minnie at San Pedro yesterday afternoon by Deputy Marshal N. O. Anderson (who is THE TIMES agent at that clace,) was followed by sensational developments in this city. Marshal Gard, with District Attorney Cole and Detective Harry Morse of San Francisco, arrived from San Diego on the evening train, when they first heard of the capture of the mysterious schooner. Prior to the arrival of the Marshal THE TIMES had received news from San Pedro to the effect that Mr. Burt, who had charge of the vessel, had left by team for Los Angeles, where he was to take the train for San Francisco. Marshal Gard also received a telegram to this effect, and at once sent out deputies to intercept the gentleman. A TIMES reporter was also detailed to look after Mr. Burt, and started out on his mission, with what success the following will show:

MR. BURT LOCATED. evening train, when they first heard of

MR. BURT LOCATED. Acting on the supposition that Mr.

AGENT ANDERSON'S EXPLOIT. DEPUTY UNITED STATES MARSHAL

The master of the "Robert and Minnie" has the honor of being arrested by the representative of the Los ANGELES TIMES at San Pedro .- [See dispatches.

Burt would take the earliest opportuby people here who are familiar with her lines. As soon as she was seen to be the much-sought-after craft, the fact was telephoned to the United States Marshal's office at Los Angeles, and a reply promptly came back to seize her.

Meanwhile the schooler had fowered a boat, in which George A. Burt, her agent or supercargo, and Pilot Dill of San Diego came ashore. It was Dill who piloted the Itata out of that harbor. nity of reaching San Francisco, THE

"Excuse me, sir, am I addressing Mr. Burt?"

"No, sir," came the ready reply. for the man from the Robert and Min-nie. On learning that such was the case, the stranger stated that he had just come up from San Pedro, had been on board the Robert and Minnie, and wished to say that THE TIMES in stat-ing that the schooner had sailed over-the line into Mexican waters, had over-stepped the limits of truthfulness.

At this juncture Dectective Morse stepped up and said, "Did you say that you were on board the Robert and Minnie, sir?" "Yes," replied the stranger. "Is your name Burt?" asked the detective; "No, sir," was the reply. "Well, I guess you're the gentleman I want, anyhow," said Morse. In response to the question as to what he was arrested for, Morse said that he was arting under instructions from Washington, whereupon the stranger at once expressed his will-Burt and Dill confirm the report that the Itata had armed mea on board when she steamed out of San Diego harbor, and that they drew their guns on the United States Deputy Marshal then on board, and told him very emphaticallythat they were going to sea, and the must not interfere. street where they were met by Deputy Marshal Flint. Snaulding proceeded to San Francisco, Deputy. Marshal Flint at once assumed the custody of Mr. Burt, and accompanied by Morse and THE TIMES man, rode up to the Marshal's office, where he was served with the warrant for his arrest. While awaiting the arrival of Marof the arresc, but had retired for the night, and deputed his deputy to take charge of the prisoner, Mr. Burt, who is a remarkably pleasant gentleman, chatted freely with THE TIMES man, but without imparting any more information than he could help.

He stated that he was perfectly satisfied that the officers were acting in good faith in arresting him, but that the Government would find itself mistaken, and would have to pay him for the trouble and annoyance it had put him to. He had not evaded a single maritime law, nor had he violated those relating to neutral powers. He had done nothing to be afraid of, and was perfectly willing to abde by the consequences of his acts. The Government should have got after Hartly and Graham of Illon, N. Y., the manufacturing exporters of the arms shipped on the schooner, and not after him.

When pressed to speak of his voyage

When pressed to speak of his voyage in the schooner Robert and Minnie, Mr. Burt said that there was nothing mysterious about her at all. The arms had been shipped by rail from the East and loaded on the vessel at the Oakland mole in broad daylight. There had been no attempt at concealment because there was no necessity for it. She left at 6 o'clock in the morning, and not at 3 a. m. as reported in the Saturday papers, with a crew consisting of himself, Capt. O'Fanelo, a cook and four seamen, and was towed by the Vigilant down the coast, until off Catalina Island. When she left the mole, there were 200 cases of fert the mole, there were 200 oasses of arms piled upon the deck aft, to make her easier, and these were 'not stowed away until after she left the Heads. When she was boarded by the custom's officers at Catalins, Mr. Downing, who was accompanied by a cowboy, dressed up in a manner that would shame a Texan "cow puncher," asked for the vassel's manifest and was shown for the vessel's manifest and was shown that and several other papers. He at first said that there was something suspicious about the vessel, and left a man named Dick on board, but after telegraphing to Washington subse-quently took him off again. The ves-sel then cruised about for several days, but Mr. Burt finally got tired of waitbut Mr. Burt maily got tired or waiting, and as he could gain no information as to the whereabouts of the steamer he was expecting, he determined to put in at San Diego. On arrival at the mouth of the harbor, however, he sighted the steamer lying in the stream within, and at once put about, and soon afterward received a communication from her. communication from her.

Soon afterward the tug, on which were Marshal Gard and Detective Morse, bore down on them and steamed within 100 yards of her, but did not hail her, much to the surprise of Mr. Burt and the crew of the schooner.

THE COURTS.

Important Decision Affecting Street Improvement.

THE CITY'S ACTION ILLEGAL

Three Divorces Granted in the Superior Court-Papers in an Appeal Case Filed -Court Notes.

Judge Van Dyke, in Department Four yesterday morning, rendered his decision in the case of M. Saunders against the city of Los Angeles, a suit brought to obtain a writ of injunction restraining the city from proceeding with the proposed opening of Third street, from Main to Los Angeles streets, on the ground that the resolution of passed by the City Council is illegal and void, denying the motion of the City Attorney for a dissolution or the writ of injunction, and thereby sustaining the

As this ruling affects a number of other streets in various parts of the city, the opin-ion of Judge Van Dyke, the full text of which is appended, will doubtless be of in-terest to a large number of citizens, as fol-terest to a large number of citizens, as follows:

"The main ground on which the complaint was upheld and the demurrer overruled in this case was that the resolution of intention passed by the City Council did not comply with the law under which the proceeding is had to open Third streat from Main to San Pedro streets.

"The present is a motion by the City Attorney to dissolve the temporary injunction and he again urges the validity of the resolution and the great inconvenience that will rollow if not sustained by the Court lnasmuch as there are other cases where the resolution of intention is similar to the one in this case.

resolution of intention is similar to the one in this case.

"The Court dislikes to be put in the position of an obstruction to what may be deemed public improvements by the widening or opening of streets, still property-owners have a right to insist that their property shall not be taken or damaged for such public purposes without a compliance with the law. These proceedings are in nivitem, and the one to be assessed or whose property is to be taken has a right to demand that the law shall be strictly followed, and it is the duty of the Court to see that his demand in this respect be compiled with.

"The act under which the City Council proceeded in this case declares that before ordering any work done or improvement made, it must pass "a resolution declaring its intention to do so; describing the work or improvement and the land deemed necessary to be taken therefor, and specifying the exterior boundaries of the district of lands to be effected or benefited by said work or improvement and to be assessed to pay the damages. costs and expenses work or improvement and to be assessed to pay the damages, costs and expenses thereof.'

pay the damages, costs and expenses thereof.

"The resolution of intention describes the lands benefited and to be assessed as follows: 'All lots and parcels of land fronting on both sides of Third street from the East line of Main street to the west line of Alameda street.' Walving the point that there was no Third street between the streets named, it must be evident that this merely draws a line through a tract of land. The Court cannot make the land to suit the convenience of parties, even of the city, but must declare it as made—if the question were doubtful, the argument of inconvenience might have weight, but not where there cannot be any well-founded doubt.

"The motion to dissolve the injunction."

"The motion to dissolve the injunction must be denied, and it is so ordered."

DIVORCES GRANTED.
In Department Three yesterday morning Judge Wade severed the matrimonial bonds of two couples to whom marriage has proved a failure. Mrs. Arcadia de Mahoney was granted a decree of divorce from J. J. Mahoney, on the ground of crueity, and was awarded the custody of her two children. Mrs. Julie P. Noel was also granted a divorce from Oscar Noel, on the ground of desertion.

Mrs. Maria B. Land was granted a decree of divorce by Judge Clark in Department Two yesterday morning, from her husband George W. Land, on the ground of desertion, the defendant having allowed the cise to go by default. The plaintiff was also granted permission to resume her maiden name. Maria B. Deaves.

APPEAL TO THE SUPREME COURT.

The preliminary papers in the aupeal case of the San Gabriel Wine Company, respondents, against William Behlon et al., appellants, were filed with Deputy Clerk Ashmore in the Supreme Court yesterday. The suit was brought by the piaintiff corporation to recover the sum of $500 alleged to be due on a contract for the purchase of a piece of land at Ramona, but the defendants in a cross-complaint claimed $3000 damages for misrepresentation on the part of the plaintiff, as the land was encumbered with a right-of-way for the San Gabriel Valley Rapid Transit Kailway, of which they had not been informed at the time of the purchase. The case was tried before Judge Van Dyke and a jury several months ago.

ing weather crop builetin for the week ending March 9:

WEATHER REPORTS.

Los Angeles (Observer)—Cool, damp nights and morning, prevailed during the week. The temperature and precipitation deportures showed a slight deficiency.

West Vernon (S. McKintey)—Thinks the weather just right for all kinds of fruits; everything looks well.

Glendale (J. C. Shirer)—The past seven days have given less than the average amount of sunshine on account of fogs prevailing until a late hour in the morning for three or four days, but no damage. About an average temperature prevailed. The weather has been favorable to farmers in their harvesting, as dryer and warmer weather would have hastened the ripening of barley, which could not have all been cut while in good condition. As it is, the hay crop is heavy and of a better quality than average. Peaches have set for a good crop. Apricots will be a much lighter crop than last year. Pears and prunes not yet advanced sufficiently to indicate crop, but former especially, are blossoming freely.

Pomona College, Claremont (Prof. Frederick Starr)—An average temperature and much sunshine prevailed. Barley doing former especially, are blossoming freely.

Pomons College, Claremont (Prof. Frederick Starr)—An average temperature and much sunshine prevailed. Barley doing well, grain of good size, turning yellow, and will soon be ready for harvest. All deciduous fruit trees in leaf, grape vines are growing rapidly.

Chino (J. H. Lee)—The past week has been partly foggy during each day, temperature slightly lower, conditions very favorable to growth of crops of all kinds. The large sugar-beet crop at this place is looking particularly well.

Riverside (W. E. Keith)—The first three days of the week gave us foggy mornings, the weather clearing about 10 o'clock a. m.; hearly all seedling oranges are out of the way, a few buds of various kinds yet hang on the trees. All crops looking well.

Asabelin (M. Nebenung)—The last seven days have been partly cloudy with occasional fogs during the night. However they have been very beneficial to all growing crops. Maximum temperature during the week ending Friday, May 8, 79°.

Tustin (E. D. Buss)—Weather remains favorable for all growing crops. Potatoes and onlons promising well and cover much more acreage than last year. Grain generally in good condition. Deciduons fruits will not reach last year's heavy yield, but the prospect is fair. Budded oranges have bloomed well; seedlings lighter. Some fog in mornings and partly cloudy days.

San Diego (Observer)—Reports a normal temperature and .10 inch deficiency in precipitation.

National City (Arthur H. Wood)—Olive trees in full bloom. Hay cutting continues.

National City (Arthur H. Wood)—Olive trees in full bloom, Hay cutting continues. The hay crop immediately north of here is reported excellent, running two tons per acre in places. Apricots are forward and strawberries cheap and plentiful. Highest temperature 68°, lowest 52°. Campo (S. E. Gaskill)—Rather dry. Need rain soon of barley will be short.

ELLIS'S NEW SCHEME.

He is Trying to Establish an Inde-pendent Church.

The following from the San Francisco

Chronicle would seem to indicate that, al hough Rev. Dr. Ellis has been convicted by the presbytery of falsehood, deception and dishonesty, he still has a few followers, and is trying to set up for himself on an independent basis:

"The tribulations of the Central Presby terian Tabernacle are not ended yet, though the trial of its pastor is concluded, and from an outward view at least, the little congrean outward view at least, the little congregation appears to have resumed the even tenor of its way. Beneath the surface there is strife. The clergyman convicted of deception and misappropriation of church funds has still a steadfast following in his congregation—a following, it is said, that is scheming even against the presbytery of San Francisco itself. It is now said openly by the opponents of Rev. Dr. Ellis and his faction, that a plan is on foot to sell the church property on Golden Gate avenue, and with the proceeds build a new church, outside of and beyond the control of the presbytery, in order to establish Dr. Ellis in a permanent pupit.

"No church in the city has a better location than the Central Tabernacle. As it stands the property is worth $50,000. Under the hammer it would scarcely bring less than $45,000. The mortgages amount to $26,000, leaving a neat little margin with which to start an independent congregation. The proposition to sell the church property is not new, and will probably used with the approbation of the entire congregation, now thirty strong, but the opponents of Dr. Ellis lift their hands in hoty terror and deem it little short of schism that a separation from the presbytery should be contemplated. Of course a majority vote of

Held to Answer the Charge of Robbery.

A NEW FEATURE IN THE CASE

Arrest of a Man for Personating ar Officer and Trying to Influence the Prosecuting Witness.

Truman Lee and George Trepanier, the railroad men charged with having robbed a German baker named Bertram of $20, last Sunday evening, on the Downey avenue viaduct, were yesterday examined before Justice Austin, and held to answer before the Superior Court to the charge of robbery, in $1500 each.

Much interest has been manifested in this case, and the railroad men were out in force. Trepanier has heretofore borne a good reputation, but Lee had just got out of a charge of having assisted in robbing an old man named Carter, the other persons implicated being two railroad men named Spring and Shaub. In this case the old man was certainly robbed, and one man had been beaten up. The three men had all been in the company of Carter, but the evidence was not considered strong enough all been in the company of Carter, but the evidence was not considered strong enough by the justice to hold them.

In the examination yesterday, a rather sensational incident took place, it came out that a man who gave the name of J. J. Black had called at the bakershop where Bertram was employed and represented himself as an officer, when he tried to find out the testimony he would give, and also endeavored to intimidate the man. During the examination it came out that Black had been employed by the attorney for the defense. On investigation, it was found that Black was not an officer, and he was arrested, but was released on $200 bond.

The German Bertram told a very straight story about the robbery, and was fully corroborated by Brose, his partner.

The defense attempted to prove that neither Tropanier nor Lee could have committed the robbery, as they were at the Southern Pacific depot about 8 o'clock, the time when the men thought the robbery took place. This, however, was easily disproved; in fact, the evidence of the witnesses for the defense corroborated the theory of the prosecution, and the men were accordingly held.

A PHILADELPHIA farm journal thinks that the outlook for the farmers the present year is encouraging. The era of low prices for live stock and live stock products seems to be passing away, and we may reasonably expect more remunerative prices for the live stock product of 1891. The fruit failure last year has swept the markets nearly bare of canned, evaporated and dried fruits, so that even with the pres ent promise of large vields, fair-paving prices may be anticipated. The prospects for the crops in this country this season are good, with the possible exception of corn. But even with that, favorable summer will make amend for late planting.

STRIKERS REPULSED.

The long, bitter and persistent fight between the iron-moulders' Union and the Iron-founders' Association in San Francisco is familiar to a majority of our readers. They will remember how the men have been constantly bragging about the defections from the ironmoulders' force and predicting the inevitable and early collapse of the works, yet how, in spite of this, the company built the San Francisco. To the Iron-moulders' Union, No. 164, San Francisco—Gentlemen: In reply to your favor of May 1st we beg to state that before the strike took place and at the beginning of it we were very desirous of arbitratine matters of difference between members of this association and your union, but our overtures were declined on the ground that the questions involved were beyond the jurisdiction of your local body. Consequently we were compelled to seek moulders elsewhere. Now, fourteen months after you voluntarily left our employ, you express a desire to arbitrate differences.

By K. J. Moore, Secretary. Another check to the unreasonable exactions of boycotters has just been furnished by the New York lumber merchants, who evidently do not believe in turning the other cheek when one is smitten. A boycott was declared against one of the lumber dealers of that city by the labor unions, Paris, the Rothschilds made demands because his men refused to go out when the recent strike went into effect. In consequence of this action, the united lumber trade in New York Brooklyn and Jersey City determined not to deliver any lumber to any building in New York city after yesterday, until the boycott is raised: About 100,000 men are effected.

These frequent reverses ought to teach insolent strikers and boycotters that capital is prepared to defend the rights which it possesses in common with labor. Because a man has, by industry, accumulated money, and be cause he employs workmen, it does not follow that he is to be deprived of the rights which the humblest citizen has o pursue happiness and carry on his business as he may see fit. The tyranny of capital is much talked of, but what appears to be most dreaded just now is the tyranny of labor.

THE STYLE OF OUR CHICAGO EX-HIBIT.

Gen. N. P. Chipman, president of the California World's Fair Association, has written an open letter to Irving M. Scott, president of the California World's Fair Commissioners, calling attention to a very grave question pending before the board, a correct decision of which, in his judgment, lies at the threshold of the ultimate good to flow to the State from its exhibit at the World's Exposition. The question is: Shall California maist upon making a cumulative display of her resources in one building, or distribute them throughout all the departments and classes in many buildings? After showing that, up to the time when the Governor approved the appropriation the universal belief wasas the purpose of the Legislature was —that California should be shown in one harmonious grouping of all we had to display, Gen. Chipman proceeds to argue the question. He shows that, under the distributive plan, the homeseeker will have hard work to find the California exhibits among the fifteen distinct departments of the fair. He would probably become disgusted and abandon the search long before he had seen more than a small portion of our display. This is certainly a most vital consideration as the most important object the State has in advertising at Chicago is to display her resources to land-seekers and attract immigration.

this State, as such, cannot enter into competition in the various departments. The State raises no wheat, nor fruit, and is not engaged in various industries as a business. It farms some in an experimental way; it makes some jute bags; but it would hardly compete with its own citizens. What then must we do with the $300,000? What must the counties do with their appropriations? Are they to go to help departments? Then, there is the question of the county appropriations. The counties will want space in the California building where they can help to augment the effects of the full display. Other along private exhibitors in the various wise, how can they spend their money Some regions of the State may no prepare and send exhibits. They contributed to the fund and must be provided for in the State building.

In conclusion Gen. Chipman says:
The suggestion that the California building be made a sort of social headquarters for the favored few who may attend from our State, with the privilege to utilize the building in a limited way to exhibit canned goods and the like, is beneath consideration, if we are to gain substantial advantage by our large outlay, The taxpayers of this State had no such narrow view in their minds when they made so liberah an appropriation, and they will not find in the headship of Department "B" may adequate compensation for yielding their rights to make a California exhibit. In conclusion Gen. Chipman savs:

The sugar members warmly opposed the amendment. MARSHAL GARD TALKS.

MARSHAL GARD TALKS.

Marshal Gard was seen at his office by a Times reporter shortly after his return, where he was talking over the rather stirring events that have been transpiring at San Diego for the past few days. The Major said that there was really very little new to tell, as THE TIMES had published everything as it had happened. He was semewhat as it had happened. He was somewhat annoyed at the manner in which an effort had been made to discredit his reports in regard to the armament of the Itata, and said that for every statement made by him he had full proof. He stated that A. Blair, the boatkeeper at Ballast Point, who had gone out and brought the Itata inro port, said that at that time the vessel was a merchantman, but that when she wont out she was a full-fledged man-of-war. There were, he said, at least 100 men on the side he was on, and they seemed to be coming on all the time. He also noticed that they were raising a rifled cannon out of the hold. This statement, the Marshal were raising a rilled cannon out of the hold. This statement, the Marshal said, is corroborated by H. R. Waters, John Green, John Cook and another man, in charge of the dredger in San Diego harbor, who said that as the Itata passed out, what looked like a six-inch rifle cannon was being placed in position forward, on the hurricane deek. The steamer was literally covdeck. The steamer was literally covered with men, mostly in uniform, and all armed, shouting and hurrahing as the vessel passed out to sea.

In regard to the captain of the Itata, Mr. Gard said that Capt Mann-zen was only the navigator, and that the real commander was a Chilean named Silva, said to be a son of the leader of the insurgents, who was ac-companied by three other officers of the Esmeralda, who were said to be passengers.

Marshal Gard reiterated the statements heretofore made by him, that he did not believe that any power at his command could have stopped the vessel, and that when all the facts came out, it would be seen that he acted in the state of the st out, it would be seen that he acted in atrict accordance with his orders. He further stated, that if the customs offi-cers had made a proper search, a dif-ferent state of affairs might have resulted.

The Marshal also gave an amusing account of the way San Diegans cut up over the seizure of the vessel, and the howl that was raised, which found yent in the meeting of the Cnamber of

Marshal Gard will probably remain in the city until all matters in regard to the Robert and Minnie are cleared

The outlook for a lively time over this Chilean matter is very encouragthis Chilean matter is very encouraging. The Omaha hurriedly left San Diego yesterday about noon, and the Charleston sailed from San Francisco at 6 o'clock yesterday morning. As outlined heretofore, the Itata and Esmeralda are to meet at Cape San Lucas, in Lower California. It is believed that it will take at least thirty-six hours to transfer the supplies from the transport to the warship. There is no doubt but that the authorities at Washington have been fully advised of the action of the vessels, and it is more than probable that the departure of these vessels may be for the purpose of eatching up with the runaways at that point.

more than probable that the departure of these vessels may be for the purpose of catching up with the runaways at that point.

It is stated that reliable information has been received that Senator Trumbull, the representative of the Chilean insurgents at San Francisco, has been or will be arrested, and there is good reason to believe that orders have been or will be issued to United States warships on the Chilean stations, one of which is the new San Francisco, Admiral George Brown in command, to intercept and capture the Itata. In this case, the San Francisco may have a chance to show her metal in real combat.

He was not here on that, but on entirely different business.

Statements of the Marshal and the Collector.

The San Diego Union of Saturday contains the following interviews with Marshal Gard and Collector Berry concerning their actions in the Itata matters:

"When I read in The Union this morning;" said Marshal Gard, "that the cruiser Charleston was expected to leave San Francisco today to chase the Itata, I deemed it best to wait in San Diego till her arrival here. Her commander will probably have use for what information I can give him about the events of the past few days, and after I have told him personally all that I know about the Itata and her officers, he will know better how to act. This, of course, is on the supposition that the Charleston is coming here. At any rate, I shall stay in San Diego until I receive an answer to a telegram which I sent to Washington yesterday, which will determine my future movements."

"You have been criticised, Major, for not ordering the fires of the steamer drawn or detaining Capt. Manuzen ashore, so as to render the escape of the Itats impossible; what bave you to say to that?"

"Only this; if I had ordered Capt. Manuzen to draw his fires, he would have undoubtedly done with me just as he did with Spaulding—locked me in the cabin and sailed out of the harbor. As for keeping the captain off his ship, I had no authority to do so. I was not ordered to arrest Manuzen, but simply to detain the Itata. If the Government had anticipated that the yessel would disregard its authority, I would have been instructed to use all force necessary to keep her here, but neither I nor my superiors had the faintest idea that Maunzen intended to take French leave till I saw him steaming out of the mouth of the harbor.

"As to the statement that Gen. Mc-Cook informed me that I could have all the soldiers I needed to enforce my orders, there is nothing in it. When I told the officers at the barracks in this city that I would like a few men to aid me in taking the Robert and Minnie, they telegraphed for authority to send them with me, and got it. returning from a call upon a sick friend, your reporter informed me of her presence in the harbor. -On Monday morning I learned from my special deputy, Mr. Higgins, that she had arrived on Sunday about 2 o'clock; that he had boarded her within an hour afterward; that her papers were all regular; that her captain said he was en route to San Francisco and was going thence to Vancouver, B. C., to go on the naval dock there to be cleaned, and that he had pat in here to take coal and ship's stores. There being a treaty of commerce between the United States and Chile, no irregutarity in the Itata's papers, and no reason, in view of the published decision of Secretary Spalding, to question the good faith of the Itata, the usual custom-house permits were issued to her, and she proceeded to take on coal and ship's stores. ship's stores.

By Telegraph to The Times. NEW ORLEANS, May 9.-[By the Associated Press.] On the 7th inst., Mr. Corte, the Italian consul in this city, addressed a communication to Foreman Chaffee of the grand jury, charging, among other things, an extra-judicial body, appointed by the Mayor, from the beginning premeditated, for a political purpose, the killing of prisoners."

This statement has given the Mayor great offense, the extra-judicial body to which reference is made, being the committee of fifty appointed by His Honor immediately after the killing of Chief Hennessy. That they should be characterized as a murderous body for political purposes has occasioned great indignation. The committee great indignation. The committee has commenced the preparation of a report which will give in detail their connection with the matter. This will be submitted to the Mayor and council on Tuesday; and on the basis of the report the Mayor will take the necessary action leading to the recall of the Italian consul. Italian consul.

RECOMMENDATIONS

DR. WOH, The Celebrated Chinese Physician.

For many years I have been troubled with lung disease, which finally ended in asthma and consumption. I consulted with the best physicians I could find but they did me no benefit, but on the contrary I got worse and worse, until il was told by one of them I could not recover. Dr. Weh took me in this condition. He has in two months' time entirely cured me. I most cordially recommend him to all sufferers.

MRS. F. WESSEL,
255 Boyd st., Los Angeles, Cal.

For eight months past my wife was a great sufferer from fomale troubles. For days at a time her pain was so severe that no rest could she obtain or sleep at nghts. Unwillingly I forced her to visit Dr. Woh, the Chinese physician. The doctor undertook to cure her and now with grateful hearts we confess to a complete recovery in her case.

Dr. Woh was recommended to me by a friend. I had been troubled for years with indigestion, causing fearful headaches and vertigo, making my life one of misery. I tried and paid the best phys clans without rehef. Finally, to please my friend, I visited Dr Woh at his office and he advised with me and gave me medicines. This was but six weeks ago. Today I can truthfully say I am entirely cured. I have not felt one symptom of my old trouble during the whole time. Dr. Woh is certainly a wonderful hea'er of the sick.

I have tried many doctors for heart disease but have derived no benefit until Dr. Woh, the Chinese physician, of Los Angeles City, prescribed for me.

Two months ago I began his treatment and can now certify that he has done me great good. I recommend Dr. Woh to my friends each able doctor.

The remedies are purely herbs and roots which Dr. Woh has familiarized himself thoroughly with by a long practice in the Imperial hospital of China. Dr. Woh is the oldest and best-known Chinese pursion in Southern California, and his cures have been remarkable, especially in female troubles, tumogs, etc. All diseases are located by and through the pulse.

of the interest he had always taken in the Territories. He congratulated the people of Utah on the progress made in a material way, and said:

You have all the elements of a great commercial and political community. You may well step forward to sift into an approximate the law and progressively in the development of great material wealth. The great characteristic of American institutions is the compact of our Government that the will of the majority expressed by legal methods at the barlot box, shall be the supreme law of all communities. Those wise provisions and that careful guardianship that shall always make the expression of the will of the people fair, pure and true, are the essential things in American life, We are a people organized npon the principle of liberty, but, my good countrymen, it is not discord, as a public officer with the men of America, as to creeds, religious or political, if they will obey the law. [Applause.] My oath of office, my public duty requires me to be against those who violate the law. earlier stages of development, more especially when a great and rich bonanza has been uncovered, like the Carbonate mine, to wit: a lawsuit.

Already an injunction has been served upon the Carbonate people, in consequence of which the mine is for the time closed. The original claimants had, at intervals of over a year, worked the mine before disposing of it to the present owners, who, in turn, have continuously prosecuted work for a like period; and not until the great gold strike was made in March last, was strike was made in March last, was there so much as even a whisper of an adverse title. But it is an old but true proverb that where the carcass is there proverb that where the caroass is there the vultures gather. So now along comes the Oro Grande Lime Company and claims the entire mine by virtue of two patents of forty acres each, obtained under the Stone and Timber Act. Just how these patents were passed through the Land Office, upon well-known and attested mineral land, upon which mining locations have been made at different times and by different parties, dating as far back as 1881, is perhaps best known to the "Lime" people. The suspension of work upon the mine, at the most, is but for the time being. In the meanwhile other mining interests are moving along with activity and as commendable spirit of enterprise as the two patents claimed to cover the Carbonate mine are the only ones in the entire district, other titles being in

Work is going ahead on the Gobiet and Northern Cross, by both day, and night shifts, and will soon begin on the Galena, next adjoining the Carbonate on the east, a large interest having been lately purchased by E. Moulton of your city who in connection with Thomas city, who, in connection with Thomas Banbury and T. J. Fleming, will begin the work of development. This locathe work of development. This loca-tion being a continuation of the Carbonate, fine results may be safely predicted.

The Aletha location, recently made by Embody & Blaisdell near town, is being worked, and is meeting the expectations of the locators. In my former letters I failed to make

At this place a tenstamp gold mill, with concentrators, was built about one year ago, and is running on ores from the Ophir mine with, I learn, gratifying results. The town is also the depot for Bear and Holcomb valleys, and other places to the east. It has two excellent hotels, a store, post-office, livery stables, etc., and what is office, livery stables, etc., and what is best of all, a fine schoolhouse.

On Tuesday Oro Grande received a visit from J. Q. Ayars, agent for THE TIMES, who established an agency here for the paper.

Some new mining deals are under way, and will soon be consummated.
As progress in development of the different mines now worked is made, my former reports of this camp are con-firmed. In fact the general opinion is that I have underrated, rather than over-estimated, the value of the dis-trict. MONTANA PLATA.

SCHOOL TEACHERS

Hold an Institute at the Wilson School.

AN INSTRUCTIVE PROGRAMME

Echoes of Friday's Feast-Matter Municipal-What Council Did Yesterday - Personals and Brevitles.

The Pasadena teachers' institute held a regular monthly meeting yesterday morning at the Wilson Grammar school. The high esteem in which these meetings are held was shown as usual by a large attendance of the teachers from the surrounding towns and districts.

The first speaker was Dr. Frederick Starr of Pomona College, who gave a finished talk on the beginning of language among the various races of man. Reference was made to the methods employed by the Indians for remembering different events, etc. The next step, and a great advance on these methods, was the picture writing, the true ancestor of the present mode of writing,

This step was well described by illustrations of the old Indian letters, drawn upon the blackboard. Among the Pueblos it is usual to record events by making pottery representations of some reminding objects. Summarizing, the growth of language was traced through reminders or objects, idlograms, or picture writings, that represent ideas, but not sounds, and then phonograms, which, by pictures, represent sounds, then to syllable representations. Leaving the North American Indians, the same processes were traced through the Egyptian, Chinese and other races, showing how our elaborate, and yet simple mode of writing is derived from the worn-out pictures of the old-time Egyptian writings.

Miss Catherine Fall of the Pomona High school, read an excellent paper on "Language in the Grammar Grades." Among other points, the necessity of cultivating a closer acquaintance with the dictionary by the pupils, was emphasized. To write well one must read much and carefally of the works of good writers; then write and rewrite, eliminating at each transcript errors and harshness of expression. Demosthenes wrote one of his most famous productions six times. Examples of the same kind were drawn from the habits of Milton, Dante and others. Correct expression is not gained by the study of technical grammar and its multiplicity of rules, but by observing the language of cultured people and by the careful study of standard writings.

Mr. Rowell, principal of the schools of Cathery Mories and transcript errors and harshness of expression is not gained by the study of technical grammar and its multiplicity of rules, but by observing the language of cultured people and by the careful study of standard writings.

The start at the scr will be given a tequivalent to an equivalent t Miss Catherine Fall of the Pomona Mr. Rowell, principal of the schools at Santa Monica, next presented the subject of "Examinations in the Schools." Some of the absurdities of schools. Some of teachers and the ways in which they are conducted were touched upon in a happy vein. Teachers who move from one district to another must pass an examination, their residual and the second services and resultation country. previous success and reputation counting for nothing, and each year or two the teacher must be examined on the subjects she has been teaching for years. But the burden of the paper years. But the burden of the paper dealt with the worry, strain and small benefit derived from the written examinations in the schools, tracing it from its rise in the East to its culmination and hoped-for setting in the West.

Mr. Dozier of the State Normal school read a paper on "Teaching the Metric System of Weights and Measures." The simplicity of this method was contrasted with the cumbersome systems now in use. The indefiniteness of our units of measure was shown by the gallon, which varies in size for was contrasted with the cumbersome systems now in use. The indefiniteness of our units of measure was shown by the gallon, which varies in size for the kind of liquid to be measured. The absurdity of our weights is seen in three systems, troy, avoirdupois and apothecaries. Druggists compound their medicines by the third and sell by the second; bread is sold by troy and butter by avoirdupois weight, and while the pound avoirdupois is heavier than the pound troy, the ounce troy is appliance it received. Altogether it than the pound troy, the ounce troy is the heavier. Not only do these systems vary among themselves, but the usage is different in even adjacent States. The advantages of a universal, uniform system does not need to be stated, and the simplicity of the metric system in its philosophic construction and the invariability of its units, render its general use a matter to be earnestly desired. Miss Packard, principal of the Los Angeles High school, who was prevented by illness from appearing at the last institute, presented a paper on "English in the High school." In sen-tences full of poetic rhythm and diction the speaker traced the course of a pupil through the various stages of sehool life, suggesting suitable selec-

The Club Continues to Grow—Sunday's Run.
The monthly meeting of the club, held Thursday evening, was largely attended. The following persons were admitted to membership: J. O. Lowe, J. Harry Caldwell, C. W. Willis, Frank H. Long, Jesse T. Merrill, W. H. Coulter and J. S. Mills. A new punching bag has been placed in position on top of a platform about seven feet square. The bag has a lively disposition to strike back and it "biffed" several tyros in the eye before they could say

It is intended to give the sparring tournament on Thursday and Friday evenings of next week. All the men who know how to handle the gloves will take part and some of the contests will prove decidedly interesting.

The cross-country race to the Hotel San Gabriel on Sunday morning will be participated in by about ten members of the club, while as many more will drive to the hotel to watch the finish and take lunch with the runners. The following course has been mapped out: From the club-room on South Raymond avenue to Kansas street; thence east to Broadway; thence south to California street; thence east to a flag; thence diagonally through a barley field and the Shorb and Winston meadows to the county road; thence south to the end of Eucalyptus avenue; thence diagonally across fields to the road leading to the hotel, where there will be a straight-away finish of 200 yards. Four or five of the best runners will start at the scratch, and the others will be given a two-minute handicap, equivalent to about a quarter of a mile. The start will be made about 9 o'clock. The course will be flagged, and timers will be stationed at frequent intervals.

ECHOES OF THE FEAST. A Pieasant Event that Will Long Be

The late hour made it impossible to do full justice to all of the details of Friday night's banquet in yesterday's The floral decorations both in the office corridor and the dining-room displayed superb taste in their arrangement. As to the banquet itself, too much praise can hardly be accorded the character of the viands set down on the menu cards-their variety, the on the menu cards—their variety, the excellency of the cooking, and the dispatch with which they were served. It is no easy task to cater satisfactorily to the wants of over a hundred banqueters. This, however, Mr. Painter accomplished to perfection, thus proving himself a model bost. Not a single criticism on the banquet has been heard, except of a most flattering character.

acter. As to the speeches, they were excep-tionally good. Mr. Masters's remarks sparkled with humor. At the same time they contained a great deal of hard common sense, as, for instance, when he urged the importance of standing by the Board of Trade, and were expressive of deep appreciation

MASTER LOWE

Handsomely Entertains a Party of An elaborate children's party was given yesterday afternoon by Sobeski Lowe, youngest son of Prof. T. S. C. Lowe, at their handsome home on Marengo avenue. About thirty masters and misses were present, and the afternoon's entertainment began with a progressive angling match, in which Miss Louise Hugus and Fred Roche came off victorious, catching the largest number of fish and winning senool life, suggesting suitable selections for the various periods, and the features that should be made prominent at each stage, and exercises that might be used for developing the various faculties at the proper time. Throughout the reading the history of literature should be studied and the authors read fitted into their respective niches. The power of literature in character building was illustrated by the effect that should be derived from the study of a variety of selections.

Owing to the longth of the programme Mrs. Bancroft's paper on "The National Element in American Literature," was omitted.

Oranges are being wrapped in tin foil and packed in small, fancy boxes, only one in each compartment, and are being shipped to Chicago. The purpose is to determine whether in this manner the fruit can be kept for a longer period and in better condition than as ordinarily shipped.—[California Fruit Grower.

We have no sympathy for a man who, having anything to sell, does not accept a thoroughly good offer for it when made. The man who waits for phenomenal figures loses oftener than he gains. There is a tide in the rates for fruit, which taken at its maximum makes a grower happy. Somethids makes a grower happy. Somebbdy may get $5 a box for oranges this selection, but the man who nets $1.50 to $2.5. has no reason to complain.—[Riverside Press.

More Train Service on the Santa Fe -Southern Pacific Plans-The Terminal Road-General Gossip.

Now that the President is once more off the Southern Pacific's lines that company notes the fact that the schedule of his train, a special one, of course, was carried out to the minute, says the Chronicle. This is an exceptional performance, especially when it is remembered that the schedule was planned a week before the arrival of the visitors; that there were many unexpected stoppages and many couplings and discon-nections of cars to make which were quite unlooked for. As a matter of fact the train never failed to be on time at every point all the way from El Paso via Santa Barbara and San Francisco, to Portland.

The special committee appointed night before last by the Chamber of Commerce to solicit new members, got out yesterday af ternoon, and in a couple of hours they gath head. They do not propose to take a rest until they have increased the membership 200, which will just about pull the chamber out of debt and put it in a position to do much good. The chamber can be made self-sustaining, and the special committee self-sustaining, and the special committee has gene to work in the right direction. With an income of $1000 a month, it is hard to estimate the good that will be accomplished for Southern California, and the committee will not rest until they have 1000 paying members. As soon as they get through in the city, two or three of them will join the financial secretary in a trip through the country, and every fruit-grower and farmer in this county will be given a chance to join. Every one of them should belong to the chamber, as the chamber has done more for them than any other class in Southern California, and it is their duty to stand in.

The Herald of Chicago, in a compli-

"HIPPOGRIFFE'S" HORSE TALK.

There is Reason to Belleve That the Great Tenny Is Out of It— If That's So, Tea Tray Should Win.

The other owners of horses in the race were promptly notified that there was $500 extra if the winner of the race beat the record, and all were satisfied. There was a long delay at the post, Tea Tray, true to his custom, breaking up start after start. Finally I hea Tray broke with his horses and down went the starter's flag. Before, however, he had gone fifty yards, he stopped. Meanwhile the others was on. Moore, the boy who rode him, applied the lash, and is ally, when the field had reached the first turn from the judge's stand—a little more than a sixteenth of a mile away, Tea Tray was got agoing. His chance then seemed hopeless, and a groan went up from those who had backed him. Moore, however, handled him very carefully. He did not bustle him, but let him rate along. life. Though not quite soold an event as the Suburban it is gradually beginning to outrank it in importance; and, now that its money value is higher, we should see a superb contest.

Thus far the races have been sensational. The first Brooklyn Handicap was run in 1887, when Dry Monopole beat Hidalgo and Bluebird in a most desperate finish, breaking the record for a mile and a quaster. Heads separated the three at the finish. The following year that great racehorse, The Bard, won rather unexpectedly so far as the general public was concerned, but his own people landed a pot of money.

The race last year resulted in a tremendous surprise. Castaway II, a 20 to 1 shot, led all the way, and literally romped in, a winner by eight lengths. His owner, Mr. J. Campbell, and his party are said to have landed over $40,000 in bets on the race.

This year the Belmont stakes last year, with 125 pounds, in a canter, beating such cracks as Devotee, Padishat, Chaos (the Futurity winner of the previous year.) Tournament (the Realization winner.) Torso, King Thomas and beat that sterling good colt, Judge Morrow, on a heavy track for the Trial stakes. Sheepshead Bay, beating Chesarde, Banquet, Chaos, Tournament, King Eric, Sir John, Kenwood and Dr. Helmult on a bad track in 1:45. Then went amiss, and although started a couple of times in the fall was never himself. He has wintered splentingly, though, and the rest of seven or eight months has made a new horse of him. He say not yet been really "pressed," as trainers put it, but he has been reeling off miles in 1:47; in such a manner that if he were asked to go a mile in 1:41 on any particular morning he could do so without any particular distress.

Tenny is top weight for the handicap and has been the all-winter favor-When books were first opened about Brooklyn he was quoted at 5 to 1, and even now when his chances of starting are almost hopeless, he is quoted at 8 to 1. On his performances last year Tenny undoubtedly deserves this favor, for, barring Salvator, he was undoubtedly the greatest racehorse of the sensational season of 1890.

One of the leading English sporting papers some few years ago gathered the opinions of the leading horse-owners, trainers and jockeys of the United Isle as to which was the greatest race horse in England for the decade. The majority favored Ormonde. Now Ormonde never was the horse that Isonomy was, and yet Parole, the American, defeated him haudily. Parole was not within fifteen pounds of Iroquois, the first American winner of the Derby in England. Yet Eole beat Iroquois in England. Yet Eole beat Iroquois handily on his return from England, and Hindoo, the greatest of the 3-year-olds prior to 1890, always had Eole at his mercy.

I have seen all of the performances of the great 3-year-olds of this country, from Kentucky down (and be it re-membered that John Hunter still inmembered that John Hunter still insists that Kentucky never had a superior on the turf at any distance.) I was one of the many who worshiped at the shrine of Luke Blackburn, who was beaten but twice—once when he fell in a race at Monmouth Park, and again on that fatal day at Sheepshead Bay when he he'de down in the race Bay, when he broke down in the race for the Coney Island cup. But after Hindoo came out in his glorious 3-year-old career, I was ready with a number of others to take an idol off the shrine and to substitute the mighty, patient, gentle giant in his stead.

Since that time George Kinney, Barnes, The Bard, Miss Woodford, Barnes, The Bard, Miss Woodford, Dewdrop and others have been offered us as objects of our adoration, but they could not stand comparison with their predecessors. It was not until Salvator came, saw, conquered, conquered again and still again and again, that we found an animal worthy of our highest admiration; and now there is hardly a doubt that Salvator was the greatest raceborse that we ever produced in this country.

and force Tenuy to what was called "sulk." but sulking in his case meant that he was asked to do the impossible, and the horse stopped for the moment and then tried again.

But Tenny will hardly be a factor in the Brooklyn handicap this year. He pulled up lame in his work three weeks ago. The lameness was not sufficient to enforce his retirement, but it was enough to stop the strong gallops that were needed to thoroughly prepare a horse of his proportions for a race like the Brooklyn. He is doing nothing but trotting and cantering now, and it will be surprising indeed if he sees the post before midsummer.

The wleavers as the battly and the means to the expenditure of money for producing tracing, promptly told him that it would be worth $500 in addition to the purse of the beat the record. "All right, father," remarked Mr. Daly, and stumped off.

The wiseacres say that he will start in the Metropolitan at Morris Park. Others have it that he is being got ready for the Surburban, which occurs a fortnight later—June 16—at Sheepshead Bay. From what I have seen of the horse I doubt whether, even if all things go well, if he will be seen at the post before the Mommouth Park meeting. Under the circumstances, Tenny would hardly be a safe horse to have a wager on for the Brooklyn handicap.

the most consistent support throughout the winter for the Brooklyn is him, but let him rate along. Thus the horse gradually began to get into his magnificent stride.

Meanwhile Baiston, accompanied by Monita Hardey was racing in front for dear life. The first half mile had been covered, and though Tea Tray had been gradually gaining ground, he was still a furlong behind his field. Then, however, he began to extend himself in a way that no horse was ever seen to do so before. Inch by inch, and stride by stride he began to cut down the daylight that separated him from his field. A quarter of a mile from home he was only two or three lengths benind his field and then the cry went up "Look at Tea Tray."

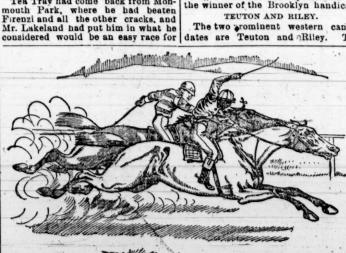

Nearing the turn for home the riders on Baiston and Hardey found that their horses were in trouble and began to draw their whips. Tea Tray was then within striking distance. Dewn the stretch the leaders came under whip and spur, but Tea Tray followed them like Nemesis. At the distance he joined them, and atter a brief challenge disposed of them, and won by a leingth. The time of the race was 1:41% but it was the unanimous opinion of the trainers and critics that from the way he got off and ran the first part of his race, he must have run the mile in 1:89.

Tea Tray is now in good shape. I was speaking to his owner only today, and he said that he never was better, or acted more kindly in his life. As a 2-year-old Tea Tray must have been very much abused, for, while not a mean horse naturally, he acts the rogue at times in a manner to make, men be guilty of prefanity of the worst kind.

Up to three weeks ago he was acting so gently and so willingly that Mr. Lakeland thought his evil-mindedness had been overcome, but the first time that he asked him to do a real genuine gallop, he cut up at a frightful rate. He refused to break away from the post. to trot, to even canter. Then Mr. Lakeland came to the conclusion that the time for kindness had ended, and coach whips were brought into play. But Mr. Lakeland and his foreman wore out two of them before Tea Tray gave in. But what has this to do with Tenny?

Only this, that Tenny was so good a raceborse that Salvator could not give him five pounds over a distance of ground and a besting. From a haif mile to a mile I think Tenny could always beat Salvator for speed, but beyond that Salvator could always beat Salvator could always maintain his high rate of speed a shade longer in the same time that the charge of climate and water and so to win I may have to beat that ould record of Tin Brook's. Now what that Salvator could always maintain his high rate of speed a shade longer in the same contest, and his owner, W. C. Daly, thought he had a real crack in him. Balston was a good horse, undoubtedly, and when on the day that Tenny tried to beat the such that Tenny the day that Tenny tried to beat the suit of the same contest, and his owner, W. C. The Monmouth Park contingent are THE BLACK AVENGER. The Monmouth Park contingent are swearing by Carroll, but although this horse has been working in marvelous fast time, he is not high class enough. Cassius and Castaway are handicapped out at 115 pounds, and Cousin Jeems will find the distance too great. Demuth is a good second-class horse, but is never able to give Tea Tray two pounds. Banquet has done some brilliant work of late, and must be considered dangerous, but Tea Tray and Burlington should hold him safe.

I gave George I a quarter and left the office. About two hours later I was obliged to return for some papers which I had forgotten. I entered cautiously, but encountered nobody more formidable than George II, who remarked: "Pete Jackson's been here again lookin' for you."

"You mean the colored man?"

"I haven't any idea; but he must be a remarkable man. According to the description I get of him, he's grown a foot taller and gained 100 pounds in weight since he came into my office at 9:30 o'clock this morning."

Evidently the studio was not a safe place for me. I went home with gratitude in my heart toward George II for concealing my place of residence. In the morning I made a flying' visit to the office to get my mail. The young lady who attended to my large correspondence, and sees that all my letters and manuscripts are misspelled and misdirected, greeted me with the announcement that the Black Avenger had just gone out. She described him to me again. According to her observations he wasn't so big a man as I had been led to expect, but the expression of his countenance was, if possible, hercer. He had asked that I should leave a note informing him when I could be found.

when I could be found.

I saw in the request a means of temporary salvation. I immediately wrote the note, and made an appointment for Tuesday of the following week. The next day George II. informed me that Pete had taken the note and would "come to time."

Then I began to prepare my defenses. I decided that I should soon be called upon to commit a southern outrage. I was also of the opinion that I couldn't do it satisfactorily alone. The only other occupant of my office, besides the boys, and the girl who drums on the typewriter, was an aged dealer in real estate—a poor fellow with one foot in the grave and the other on Staten Island, where he lives in a house he has never been able to sell. By the way, speaking of that In a house he has never been able to sell. By the way, speaking of that charming suburb, I am told that one of its advantages as a place of residence (for real-estate dealers) is that the wicked who die there are not obliged to leave the island unless they prefer to do so. Thus far, however, none have remained.

But the old real-estate dealer was hardly the man to assist in wholesale slaughter, so I gave him notice to quit, and rented his desk to the agent for a fire-arm factory, who brought some and rented his desk to the agent for a fire-arm factory, who brought some fine samples of his amiable goods. I was especially pleased with the appearance of a large, new Gatling gun, which the agent said could discharge 500 shots a minute, and had been brought up with strong race prejudices. Then I sat and listened for colored footsteps in the hall, but they did not come.

By an abstruse process of reasoning I had come to the conclusion that my mysterious pursuer was the collector for a tailor to whom I have the happiness to owe a balance of $25. I have owed it a long time without remorse. I am naturally of a mild and forgiving spirit, but the sin of the tailor is unpardonable. Mera assault and hattery spirit, but the sin of the tailor is unpardonable. Mere assault and battery

Then I remember when I tried to wear the suit for the sake of economy how my wife said: "Hewdy, what makes you carry one shoulder so much higher than the other? You're positively getting one-sided."

And my friends used to come up behind me on the street and tell me that I was getting round-shouldered, and that I looked ten years older in the last six months. Brown, who strikes a 400-pound blow, used to creep up behind me and slap me on the back in a way that displaced my vitals, while he me, I felt that I could turn the Gat-tling gun upon him without a qualm. Meanwhile I kept getting incidental descriptions of the Black Avenger from various people—the janitor, the elevator boy and others. No two of these rescriptions agreed, but I built my ideal character from the most terrible features of all the stories.

And one day he called. George I.

Few Cranky Congressmen to Blame-Chilean Trade with the United States-How It Might be increased.

SANTIAGO DE CHILE, April, 1891 .-[Special correspondence of THE TIMES.] We hoped for better news by this time from the seat of war; but the clouds that overhang unhappy Chile grow darker every day, and the end of the revolution appears no nearer than ever. One thing is certain-the rebels are gaining ground, though inch by ineh, and the resources of the government are slowly diminishing. Though President Balmaceda has only about four months more to serve, his most sanguine friends hardly think he will live to see his successor inaugurated. Should he succeed in completly defeating his foes, which is not likely, he would surely fall by the hand of some revengeful assassin; and in the event of victory by the opposition, his fate is sealed. It is said that even the officers of the Chilean navy, many of whom the President formerly loaded with favors, have signed a solemn com pact never to lay down their arms till they have hung Balmaceda in the Plaza

Might makes right in Chile, and in the present state of anarchy nobody's life is safe. Foreigners who have money invested here are blue as blue can be, and devoutly wish they had "sunk" it almost anywhere else. In spite of trouble, a good deal of amusement is created by some of the United States newspapers that occasionally stray down here, conthat occasionally stray down here, con taining the most absurd stories regard taining the most absurd stories regarding the Chilean situation and giving detailed accounts of battles that never occurred. These reports are doubtless evolved from the brains of enterprising journalists who are "on the spot" in the home office, and they serve the double purpose of filling space and satisfying that gullible individual, yclept the General Reader. the General Reader.

the General Reader.

Other reports are also unfortunately spread abroad in the North, which, though containing some truth, are much too one-sided to give the publica correct knowledge of the case. For example, one of the great New York dailies boasts of having a native "special correspondent" in Sautiago. The journalist aforesaid (who was born in Chile, of an American father and a Chilean mother) is a member of the Opposition, though by no means a prominent one—an "Alternate" in the Chilean Congress, which means that Chilean Congress, which means that he has a seat there in the absence of a he has a seat there in the absence of a certain Delegate. In other words he is himself a rebel against the government and altogether too deep in the muddle to be expected to accord justice to the other side of the question. This het-headed young man naturally paints his Bete-noir, Balmaceda, in lurid colors as a tyrant and would-be dictator, and has a great deal to say about how the country has been oppressed by "one-man power," etc.

The sober truth is that a political clique desire to usurp the rights of the executive; and it is extremely doubtful executive; and it is extremely doubtful if such a régime—judging from their actions during the last half year, which have cost the country thousands of lives and millions of dollars—would be better for the people than the long-established order which had made Chile the most prosperous of South American republics. Nobody disputes that Balmaceda was the fairly-elected choice of the nation, or accuses him of baving ever gone beyond the rights accorded him by the constitution. So far from aspiring to over-much authority, his first great mistake was in holding the reins too loosely. The opposition were determined to find fault, on one pretext or another—as shown in their persistent objections to Balma-ceda' cabinet, although he appointed three different sets of ministers in the vain effort to please in the vain effort to please them. Considering that the present incumbent's term was so nearly over, gif these patriots had really had the interests of the country at heart, they would have directed their efforts toward electing a man of their own ideas to succeed him and to amending the Constitutions on a to limit what the Constitution so as to limit what the constitution so as to limit what they call "one-man power."

Unfortunately for Chile, this rebellious faction in the legislative chamber possesses much power for ill, and by refusing to pass needed appropriations in their efforts to hamper and coerce the President, they brought suffering upon many people, which led used in Chile yet come from Great and coerce the President, they brought suffering upon many people, which led to strikes and riots, and finally to armed rebellion. Balmaceda made every possible concession, short of rendering his government a farce, to preserve peace, but the further the cranky Congressmen became involved, the more pride and obstinacy prevented retraction—and so things went from bad to worse. Thus a handful of unscrupulous politicians are directly responsible for the butchery of many thousands of their countrymen, the murder of women and children, business failures all over the land, and the suffering for food which has come upon a large proportion of the population—and had Balmaceda promptly executed every man of them as a traitor, all this trouble might have been saved.

At the best of times food is dear in Chile, because so much of the country is not agricultural; and now that supplies can no longer be brought in from abroad, prices are so tremendous that distress prevails. Think of paying $5 for a small chicken, $10 per pound for a ball-grown hog! There is no set standard of prices, but they range according to the necessities of the people, and the figures above quoted have actually been paid in Chile within the past fortnight.

A few evenings ago the good citizens of Santiago were treated to a little scare. From private dispatches received by the government, trouble of some sort was apprehended, but the barticulars were not made public.

The police force was largely increased, and everybody sent home from the clubs, cafes and other resorts at an early hour. gleaned the following facts: Half a century ago Chile received more goods from the United States than any other country; but now we come fourth on the list — Great Britain sending by far the largest quantity, Germany second and France third. The principal reason of our falling off is from lack of decent means of communication. Shipments from the northera Republic are generally made at New York or Boston, although a few articles come from Philadelphia and others from Baltimore. They must either go away down around and others from Battimore. They must either go away down around Cape Horn or be landed at Aspinwall, transported by rail across the Isthmus, and reshipped at Panama. The freight charges from New York to Valparaiso via the Isthmus are more than double that from European ports to the same destination; and it is said to be about thirty per ceute cheaper to to be about thirty per cent cheaper to ship goods from New York to Europe and thence to South America than to send them by way of Panama.

So very high are steamer rates of transportation from the United States that most goods are sent by sailing vessels around the Horn, occupying from four to six months in transit. from four to six months in transit. One great reason why the Chilean merchant profers to trade with England. Is because the goods arrive in the same steamer with the bill of lading, and ninety days of grace being allowed on the latter, he has a chance to realize his profit before making payment. If from the United States, the bill comes by steamer in about thirty days, while the goods require nearly half a year to be wafted by sails; and it often happens that he has to pay for things he has never seen, months before their arrival.

voyage one way is pretty sure to be a dead loss. Another unfavorable cir-cumstance is that the heavier mer-chants in Chile are almost universally Europeans, and they naturally look for voyage one way is pretty sure to be a dead loss. Auother unfavorable circumstance is that the heavier merchants in Chile are almost universally Europeans, and they naturally look for Europeans goods; whereas, were Yan kees engaged in business here, they would use home articles whenever practicable. The ubiquitous commercial traveler, with his grip-sack, flirtatious propensities and chronic smile, is not abroad in South America as at the north; neither is advertising the north; neither is advertising carried to any such extent. Many leading United States firms issue noleading United States firms issue no-tices and price-lists especially for the South American trade, generally printed in the two languages; but by far the better plan would be to advertise as extensively and attractively in the local papers of these cities where their wares are little known, as at home where the public is familiar with the United States are agricultural implements, machinery, cotton goods, lumber and parafine. Our country now does a good business with Chile in the hardware line, though formerly England monopolized it. The screws used in Chile yet come from Great Britain, but all the nails from the United States. Wall-paper is another item of considerable export. The cheaner grades come from Germany.

But in spite of all drawbacks, Chile received from the United States last year about $2,863,237 worth of goods. The last official statement I saw gave The last official statement 1 saw gave the total annual imports as approximating $39,341,351 in value; and the exports $60,519,827—the latter figures, of course, iucluding guano, saltputer and precious metals.

The principal articles received from the United States are agricultural implements, machinery, cotton goods.

The pleasure-loving Chileans buy most of their billiard tables from us; and lately a good many Chicago elevators have been introduced, they having become quite the fashion in private houses—a characteristic extravagance where the casas are rarely more than two stories high. There are Edison telephones in every town and city; and until recently the Brush electric light was used in Santiago-till, through mismanagement, the company failed failed disastrously and the city went back to gas.

There is a vast amount of wealth in Chile, and the ruling classes are lavish in their expenditures. Before these revolutionary troubles, money was plenty, and few stopped to count the cost when anything was desired. Santiagonians boast that every article of luxury to be found in Parls may be bought in their city, and a town of the shops convinces one of the truth of the assertion. No visitor to Santiago ment. If from the United States, the bill comes by steamer in about thirty days, while the goods require nearly haif a year to be wafted by sails; and it often happens that he has to pay for things he has never seen, months before their arrival.

Another inducement to European trade is the advantage to the shipper of being sure of a return cargo; while with the United States, at the present status of commercial relations, the yoage one way is pretty sure to be a dead loss. Auother unfavorable cir-

I make rather aspecialty of children's parties. It's not because I am fond of takking to children, for I don't know how, but because I like to look at them. There was a very gay and bright little fete the other evening, at which all the decorations were of apple which all the decorations were of apple which all the decorations were of apple blossems. It was a sort of pour prendre conge for a couple of little maids whose mother shares with a good many other women the strange taste that sends small American girls to France to grow into large Auglo-Parisian girls. These two particular little girls were at least having a beautiful and blossomy fastival particular little girls were at least having a beautiful and blossomy festival before their departure. hand.
The other night there was a riding exhibition at which some or the most interesting displays in the ring were made by children. There was a yellow-haired girl who rode a big black horse. Her long curls fell down over her back, and her habit of dark blue treasted the was cut exactly as her horse. Her long curis fell down over her back, and her habit of dark blue broadcloth was cut exactly as her mother's would have been, even to the starched shirt, the sharply turned revers and the stiff little tie. Her small riding boots were the perfection of dainty smartness, and in costume she owned to her very immature years only in that instead of a nigh hat she wore a derby. As she stood waiting for her turn to ride again there came up a lad of 12, perhaps, who was one of the equisarian stars of the evening. "Let me congratulate you, Reginald," said Yellow Hair, with an air and grace as perfect as if, instead of 11, she had been 19. "Permit me to thank you, Edna," returned the lad, and the stately, formal and pretty exchaige of contesies between the two was as interesting a thing as there was to see in the course of the evening. In many little matters of this sort we are going back to the careful punctilio of what many are pleased to call the good old times.

It interests me always to note how women dress their children, there is such a difference between the senseless heaping of ornament and the outlay of thought and originality that results in something removed from a fashion plate on a small scale. There is one little girl whose succession of frocks has been in a way a study to me ever since she was big enough to walk alone. They always suit her, express something of her own proper individuality, and it would not be easily possible to imagine them worn by any other child. Small women of my acquaint-ance, and large ones, I think of as a rule without reference to their attire, but this long-lashed little mistress presents; herself to me always as I last saw her clothed. I am thinking of her this evening in an antique-looking figured silk in soft coloring of bronze, copper and lemon yellow, cut simply yet with a touch of fancy that suggests Kate Greenaway's illustrations: She holds a kitten in her arms, and with her is a girl cousin whose frock is of gray-green cashmere with lemon silk at the throat and lemon ribbons in her curls. rule without reference to their attire.

There was a child of perhaps 5 years whom I noticed a few days ago in one of the big dry goods stores. Her mother was "matching," something, and there stood the patient mite in an Empire frock of a dull beige-colored cashmere with a deep flounce at the bottom, about which ran ruche and heading of bunched ribbon loops of pale blue. Her ribbon sash tied under her arm pits and hung in ends on the left side. The soft, short, loose waist came up over a guimpe of white muslin dotted with blue, and epaulets of muslin without the dots were plaited on the shoulders and brought round in fans to meet at the points of the shalfans to meet at the points of the shal-low V of the waist in front and bo-hind. These epaulets were quantity smbroidered and gave the effect of a smbroidered and gave the effect of a little white pelerine. The full sleeves were brought into cuffs at the wrists, these being headed with ribbon ruchings. blue velvet ribbon.

The small girl whose mother promotes her to straw hats should be very happy, for those of drawn silk or muslin are heavily burdened with things meant as adornments, but usually far meant as adornments, but usually far enough from being ornamental. Silk pompons are pretty, when the fancy of the trimmer can confine itself to any-thing so simple, but ostrich plumes reckoned by the half dozen are more common and are so mixed with flowers and lace fullings and ribbon puffings that a hat top comes to look as if in joke somebody had set how much and how

For girls of a little larger growth it is becoming very usual to make dresses with vests and fronts of shirts in con-trast with the rest of the costume, and

Three-quarter jackets and mantles with capes and Medici collars are shown for big girls and for middlesized girls as for their mothers, but more points of interest are presented by the pelisses for babies, which are made with one or two capes cut into a small yoke and looking like masses of unmitigated lace or embroidery. Deep cashmere flouncings are brought out to contribute to this effect, and several new wide and rather coarse laces. new wide and rather coarse laces. Point de Venice is the favorite baby lace with people who can afford it, and the cream silk that goes with it. An Irish Missionary.

They tell of a powerful Irishman out in Africa who seized the wretched Arab who was paddling him across a stream, threw him overboard, and grabbing him by the back of the neck as he rose to the surface of the water, hissed in his ear:

"Will you renounce the prophet and become a Christian?"

"Allah forbid," sputtered the Arab.

"Down you go, then," said the Irishman, and he ducked the Arab under again. In about a minute he pulled him up and shouted:

"Will you believe in the Christian's God?"

Began His Naval Career at Four Years of Age-Some of His Achievements of . a Century.

On Sunday, April 12, Admiral Sir Provo Wallis of the British navy celebrated his one hundredth birthday. Nothing in naval annals equals the record or service which this magnificent old veteran can show, his name having been entered on the books of one of King George III's ships in 1795, when he was a child of four years old, and he himself being still as a centenarian the ranking admiral on the active list of the English navy. More that this, he actually began active service before the opening of the present century, having joined H. M. S. Cleopatra toward the end of the year 1800. Not only is Sir Provo Wallis interesting to Americans from his having been born in Halifax, Nova Scotia, but he is doubly so in view of his being the last survivor of the historic fight between the Shannon and the Chesapeake. Swoond lieutenant at the time of that famous battle, when Capt. Broke was wounded and the first lieutenant killed, the command of the vessel devolved upon young Wallis, who took the Shannon and her prize into Halifax harbor after the victory. Survivors of the War of 1812 there are but few, on either side of the water, and of all who still remain to testify to the scenes of that great conflict, Admiral Wallis is easily the most distinguished. ing of the present century, having distinguished.

While belonging to her he cut out a vessel in St. Ann's Bay, Guadaloupe, when he was 21, and in the Curieux he was finally wrecked on the enemy's coast. Transferred later to the Glorie, he was present at the destruction of the two 44-gun French frigates at Ause la Barque and the batteries under which they lay, and was at the surrender of Guadaloupe, for which he received a medal. But his most memorable achievement was in connection with the encounter He became lieutenant in 1808, when

The children's outfits that are being prepared with so many happy thoughts of a summer in the country exhibit a good deal of smocking. With the smocking goes embroidery in outline. A dress just finished for Mrs. Themas Edison's tiny daughter is of gray cashmers worked with deep crimson silk. It is smocked at the throat in a narrow band, and then the fullness is set into lods forming a yoke, upon which is set the bodice, having a tiny frill, below which is another narrow band tucked, and upon the waistband, deep shoulder straps and banded cuffs are worked light scroll patterns. A tiny little bag to hold a handkerchief hangs from the waistband and this too is finished with needlework.

Mrs. Frank Leslie's Project.
New York Correspondece Chicago Herald.
I had a chat with Mrs. Frank Leslie the other morning about her proposed club building or institute for women. Mrs. Leslie said that since the publication of the fact that she intended to leave her fortune for this purpose she has been deluged with letters from cranks all over the country advising and directing her how to proceed. One wrote asking her why she did not build this institute during her life—instead of leaving it for her executors to quarrel over. Mrs. Leslie replied: "Because I am not in love with poverty. Ten years ago I was both cold and hungry. I do not propose to ever be so again. I am fond of the good things of life—beautiful clothes, jewels, luxurious living, traveling and entertaining. All these things cost money, and I do not intend to go without them." Mrs. Leslie's plan isto have a building named for herself, with offices for women's clubs, studios for women artists and sculptors, a library for women journalists, a lecture-room, baths and a café. While these offices and studios will not be free, they will be ronted at a very moderate sum, and the institution will not be entirely self-supporting Mrs. Leslie sails next week for her summer's rest in Europe. The lady has been very ill with the grip. At times fears of her recovery were entertained, Mrs. Ayer, too, has been very low with this dread disease. I saw the latter at a reception the other evening. She wore a jouquil-colored crépe gown, the exact hue of her beautiful hair, and while she was one of the prettiest women in the room, she was very pale from the effects of her severe illness.

AN ESCAPE TO SAN FRANCISCO.

The Terrible Experiences of Some Gilber Island Natives Who Put to Sea to Avoid the Kidnapers-The "Contract" Slaves

ECENTLY a sailing vessel arrived at San Francisco having on board a group of peculiar looking people, consisting of several men, women the ship had pick ed up in the South Pacific ocean a few weeks before. When found they were in a canoe speak no intelligible language, and made their wants known by signs. People who had traveled in foreign countries, and es-pecially among the islands of the South Pacific ocean, endeavored to talk to them, but without success.

At last a young Englishman named Buckland, who had lived for several years on the Gilbert islands, in the South Pacific, happened to visit the dock where the cast aways were temporarily quartered, and spoke to them in Gilbert island language. In a moment they replied, all chattering excitedly at the same time.

Ten days before they had been rescued by the sailing ship a "blackbirding," or kidnaping, expe-dition composed of two vessels had ap-peared near the village. The natives knew the ships had called on business and hastened to escape to neighboring islands, fif-teen or twenty miles distant, but before the party in question could reach a haven of refuge a storm suddenly came up and drove them far out to sea, where they lost their bearings. Their supply of food and water became exhausted, and for five days they suffered the torments of hunger and thirst. During this time three of the party died. Then the signals of distress hoisted by the survivors were observed by the sail-ing vessel, which hove in sight and took them to San Frincisco.

Two weeks after their arrival they were shipped back to the Gilbert islands on a vessel which intended to touch there.

Kidnaping to a large extent has pre-valled among the islands in the South Pa-cific ocean for many years, and still exists, although but little is ever heard in the United States concerning the practice, ow-ing to the remoteness of those islands and the few opportunities afforded for com-munication with the more civilized parts of the world.

The smaller and more insignificant islands are preferred by the professional man hunt-ers in which to carry on their search. The important islands are avoided for several reasons, one being that white men live on reasons, one central that white then two on some of them, and would forcibly object to the stealing and carrying away of the na-tives, while the larger islands, generally belong to some of the European powers, England, for instance, having "annexed" and taken under its protection Fiji, Tonga and Raratonsa; France owning Tahiti; Spain the Caroline islands and Germany the Marshall group.

It is to the smaller, less civilized and more remote islands that the man hunters direct their attention. The New Britain, Solomon, Gilbert, Nuie and a few minor groups offer especially inviting fields. The kidnenga is nearly than the statement of the kidnaping is usually done under the semblance of law, but the result is quite the blance of law, but the result is quite the same as though no such observance.was had. Samoa is a particularly attractive market for see disposal of human chattels. There are located many foreign firms, or their agencies, engaged in operating large plantations and conducting extensive gen-eral merchandise stores. One firm employs over fifty European clerks in its store and warehouses, while on the plantations it owns and leases it employs a number of European overseers. The merchandise sold in the stores is shipped chiefly from Europe and Australia, some being sent from the United States also. The goods are either sold for cash to the Samoans and others or else exchanged for "copra." It may be explained that copra is the white meat of the cocoanut, which is cut out of the nut, cured in the sun for a certain length of

The market price of copra in Samoa fluc-uates slightly, at present being two and a quarter cents per pound in cash, or two and a half cents in trade. In Hamburg it is six or seven cents per pound. It can therefore readily be seen what great opportunities for financial profit exist in the many ufacture. That copra may be made in suf-ficient quantities and at a minimum cost, cheap labor is indispensable. The Samoans are a particularly proud race, and never having worked in the past refuse to do se now; nor is there any reason why they should, as far as the procuring of food is concerned, for in Samoa nature is so boun-tiful that she supplies food in abundance. Under this state of affairs the owners of plantations are forced to look elsewhere for labor, and they accordingly turn to the just as Black Care was socially mounted on every man's shoulder, Talbot stepped out on the beach, and with as ch an air as if he were proposing a lark ashore volunteered to take one of the ship's boats, and attempt the trip to the Hawaiian islands.

But I believe if you give a sailor a sin gle plank he will see material for a flotilla, and so, after a pause of a few minutes-a tribute to discipline-the young officer was almost lost in the vave of sailor men that surged around him, asking, urging, pleading to go with him, although every man jack of them knew it was almost certain death he volunteered for. And then, when the choice fell on the coxswain Halford and three able seamen named Andrews, Muir and Francis, the others almost fought about it. The crew picked, Talbot passed in review of all the boats that had survived the wreck, selecting the whale boat, which was raised on rude stocks-made from the Saginaw's drift-and work began on her that very day.

The seals and otters, sole occupants of the island for several peaceful years, made off in dismay before the swarm of two legged intruders, who brought such active life and intolerable sounds to their tranquil retreat; for not only did the the whale boat, but Sicard, to hearten up the men, set them to building a schooner of the Saginaw's planks and beams in which to sail to safety if Talbot's efforts failed.

Through days of dreary weather the work was pushed, and on the 17th of November the whale boat was ready for her venture. She was well prepared as far as the limited supplies of the ship wrecked permitted, but, compared with the elemental forces against which she must battle, and considering the season of the year, it seemed as though she could

In the choice of these latter they had to be guided by guesswork entirely, for all the labels had washed off in the wreck, and although the best looking and the largest were selected, and the supply was lavish, the contents of many of them proved so unsuitable for such journey that they not only jeopardized its success, but actually precipitated the

This route was advised not only be cause it was in the track of ships, but also because the islands cover an area of about a hundred miles, which greatly increased the chances of their being sighted, no matter how the calculations inevitable, for in a small boat the motion is so very lively that an accurate reckoning is almost impossible. Then, too, the mountain peaks are lofty, and the smoke of the twin volcanoes can be seen long before the islands themselves are raised.

A tracing of the chart and some navigation instruments were given him, and then, in the sparkling light of full noon, the little craft put out through the open ing of the reef and danced joyously off on her mission.

A deep throated cheer followed them, and as its echoes pealed over the lonely waters an answer came drifting back reedy and thin with distance, but keyed

When the wind and the sea were not actually grappling in savage conflict, clouds obscured the sun and blotted out the stars; the navigation instruments proved absolutely useless, and the dead reckoning was so faulty that it was a miracle the islands were sighted at all. Talbot was also ill, but his cheery spirit and powerful will kept him about, and even when wrung blue with anguish his courage was still strong enough to hold up the fainting hands of the men who prayed to heaven for help. Once the sun shone for a few hours, and by means of the lenses of an opera glass they got a light and built a fire the first warmth of the journey. They cooked some food, but there was too lit tle of it to do much good, and the boisterous waters still drenched them and a keen wind searched their bones, and all too soon a bursting roller quenched the friendly blaze.

On the 16th of December, Friday, a conical cloud rose on the horizon—rose, but lay still instead of scudding away with ruin in its breath as the others did.' Then Halford shouted, "Land ho!" He had been to the islands once before, and recognized Kauhulnau rock, the most extreme southwestern point of the group.

As the boat rose and fell on the rollers the misty smudge of Nihua and even Kania hove in sight, but the wind shouldered the forlorn boat's crew back from the shore, and beat and tack as they would her head fell away again and again, and the last they could do was to

The tragedy now drew to a rapid close. Sunday night they were off Hanelei harbor, and still the wind with its mighty flail winnowed out their strength

At midnight they hove to. Then the slope of heaven touched 1 o'clock—the last day had come.

Two o'clock was marked by the wheeling stars-half-past, and then, like a panther, the wind leaped out to sea, and, crouching back of its quarry, blew in shore as fiercely as it had before blown

Dreading another change, they decided not to wait for morning, but to make harbor at once, and when the boat's head was put on Talbot drew his first breath of assured safety for those in his charge and the shipmates left behind in the lonely Pacific.

As the water shoaled toward the ridge of the reef Halford came up from below. He says as he got in the cockpit a wave broke abaft, and Talbot called out: "Steady, there. Bring her by the wind." Both Francis and Andrews sprang to obey him, but a heavy wave burst against the boat's side, upsetting her and washing them both away to the mysterious death of the sea. They were never seen again.

Talbot managed to catch and cling to the bilge of the boat as she floated keel up, and Halford—who was hanging to the stern and casting off his clothing— called to him to come astern and climb up on her. But, drowning his words, ne a third wave, and when it passed In the pause of the gathering sea he scrambled on the boat's bottom, and clinging there, rode naked through the glittering death that beat and broke about him. And the first line of break-ers was passed in safety. In the second the boat rolled over, but righted herself head on to land, and drifted ashore near Kilihi-Kai, five miles As she drifted there rose groans from the cockpit, and the sailor, Muir, who had been below during all these scenes, came out on deck, a hopeless madman.

As the boat touched the beach Halford took what papers he could save and helped Muir ashore, then fell exhausted and slept or fainted until daybreak. When he awoke Muir was gone, and he saw the natives taking something from the sea. Hoping it was his beloved commander, he dragged himself to the spot; but the purple face, starting eyeballs and foam covered lips were those of his messmate, horrible in death.

After securing the boat and getting some food and clothing from the kindly Kanakas he began to patrol the beach waiting to see whether the incoming tide would give up its dead.

At 7 o'clock the rollers heaved into sight and tossed from crest to crest a dark object, and rushing into the surf Halford drew out Talbot's body; and although his reason told him it would be useless, his love impelled him to work for hours to revive him. When forced to admit the futility of his efforts he rode to Hanelei to deliver up his trust, ask burial for the dead and to beg the immediate dispatch of help to those his officer

PRIMITIVE PEOPLE

METHODS THEY PURSUED IN COOK-ING THEIR FOODS.

A Synonsis of a Lecture by Professor Morse-The Antiquity of Cooking-Original Manner of Applying Heat to Meats and Vegetables-Esquimaux Huts.

Professor Morse gave his second lecture on "Primitive People" at Academy hall, and spoke particularly of fireplaces and stoves. In opening he briefly reviewed his first lecture, making special reference to the fact that men and animals adapt themselves to their surroundings. Thus dogs and cats in civilized homes eat corn and oatmeal, while cows in Iceland will eat salt fish as a steady diet, though neither of these animals would eat such food in the ordinary natural state.

Proceeding to the subject in hand,
Professor Morse cited the finding of baked cakes with the Egyptian mummies as evidence of the antiquity of cooked food, and of the universal primitive fashion among savage or primitive peoples of cooking food in vessels resting on three rounded stones, which man very early found out were better than four. This method was employed the North American Indians, the Esquimaux, the modern Fians, and even by the Irish in the Seventeenth century.

Another method employed was the cooking of meats in baskets of water with hot stones. Some tribes of the North American Indians cooked corn, grasshoppers, and perhaps other delica cies by placing them in clay lined bask ets, with red hot coals, and shaking the baskets back and forth and blowing off the ashes and cinders till the contents were done to what the Indians probably considered a turn.

ESQUIMAU HUTS The kitchens of New Zealand and Cey-Ion are but rough primitive forms of many that are seen in Germany and Engexcept that in the former case the fires are out of doors. English and German fireplaces are far behind the American stove and cooking range, and are really survivals of prehistoric times though the hearths for the fires are raised and arrangements made for the escape of the smoke Succeeding the period of placing nots on three stones over the fire comes their suspension by some support, a familiar method being by means of three sticks fastened together at the top. The Esqui-mau suspends his kettle from the ceiling of his ice hut by means of cord or hide And here the lecturer departed from his subject to describe how the hut is builtspirally, with blocks of ice and of dome The hut is lined with skins, so that what little of the ice melts will not drop down on the occupants in the form of water. These huts are warmed by open crude oil lamps, in which is moss saturated with oil, and over them are suspended the kettles. The oil comes from the animals, and is obtained by the women and children, whose principal business it is in the winter time to chew blubber to get the oil. Under the hut there is u ally a large supply of blubber stored for

Professor Morse describes the stoves of China and Japan, and showed two patterns of what appeared to be earthenware portable stoves, about the size of bean pots. Other stoves are rough clay or brick affairs, with openings for wood and varying numbers of holes on top for the accommodation of cooking utensils and none have arrangements for the di rect escape of the smoke out of doors.

RARLY METHODS OF GETTING FIRE Some of these eastern stoves have shrines or symbols over the fireplaces to keep out evil spirits, and in some of them light is kept burning, or a little food or some other trifle placed by way of invoking the care of some good spirit over the food that is to be cooked.

In closing, the lecturer had something to say about primitive modes of creating and preserving fire, followed by some interesting experiments with crude appli-The origin of fire is not known, nor its first discoverer, but the discovery ust have been followed by a tremendous stride of advancement by the human race.

There recently came to an end at Paoli Ind., one of the most remarkable criminal Ind., one of the most remarkable criminal cases of modern times, in which death seemed to favor the accused at all points. Three years ago Jacob Johnson quarreledwith Ovid White and Omri Thompson at Salem. In the early evening an old farmer saw a rider pass his place at breakneck speed, going northward. Two others pursued him. A shot was fired. In the morning Johnson's body, bullet pierced and with head crushed, was found. White and Thompson fled. Thompson was captured with head crushed, was found. White and Thompson fied. Thompson was captured in Kansas about a year after the murder, and brought back, tried and convicted. He was given a life sentence in the Prison South two years ago. He and another convict made one of the boldest breaks for liberty on record.

They sawed through the chapel floor, and had nearly reached New Albany, where, while hiding in a barn, a dog be trayed them. A most exciting chase followed, but by noon they were recaptured. Meanwhile White was enjoying his liberty until last fall a year ago, when he was

SANTA MONICA, May 9.—[Corresto idence of The Times.] The most interesting feature of the week is the "feast of flowers," now in progress at Steere's Opera House. Many neglected apple orchards show a row of sap sprouts from the trunk, and often extending one or two feet from the body of the tree where roots have been torn by the plow or cultivator. It is hardly necessary to say that such trees cannot be productive of fruit until this unnecessary drain on the vitality of the tree is removed. Do not wait until these sprouts are in leaf, as that will be too severe a shock to the tree. Cut them off while buds are dormant, and then should new sprouts start rub these off when they Apples Ruined in Transportation.

At this season of the year green apples are very scarce and high-priced in this market. Shipments from Australia and New Zealand have commenced to arrive. The last steamer brought some 1700 boxes from Tas-mania consigned to D. G. Camarinos, a large commission merchant of this city. From some cause—either poor city. From some cause—either poor ventilation or carelessness in packing the apples too close to the boiler or smokestacks of the steamer—they arrived in very bad condition, partly baked or stewed and unfit for use. The consignment, valued at $3500, will prove nearly a total loss. Mr. Camari-nos will probably endeavor to collect damages from the steamship company, when the responsibility of carriers regarding perishable products will prob-ably be definitely settled in our courts.

J. S. CLARKSON'S PLANS.

He Will Naturally Re-enter Journalism

ON HIS RETURN FROM EUROPE.

The Beauty Show-The Story of New York House-The Men Who Wear Out-Nosos and Ears.

|COPYRIGHT, 1891 | NEW YORK, May 4.—[Special Correspondence of The Times.] Mr. James S. Clarkson, who has just set out for Europe apparently in the best of spirits, undisturbed by Anna Dickinson's "our friend the enemy," or anything else on this earth, is a remarkable man. Political allies and opponents alike prophesy that his will be a personality well worth watching for the next year or so. As the president of the League of Republican Clubs he will wield considerable power prior to the next na tional convention of his party. The power one understands on meeting the man. He is still in middle life, a compact, well-rounded man, physically and mentally. He has the diplomatic. courteous speech, the clear insight and quick grasp of the trained journalist at his best. His part in the successful campaign of 1888 has never yet been exaggerated. More even than Quay or Dudley, he was the practical working head of the Republican National Com-

head of the Republican National Committee.

Before his departure Mr. Clarkson let fall some words indicative of his purpose and ambition, when he spoke of the urgent necessity to the Republican party of reaching the newspaper readers of the country as well, at least, as the Democrats now do. He would have been glad at any time since leaving the Cabinet to secure a newspaper foothold in New York, where the Democrats have things pretty much their own way, but no opening appeared, and he did not care to be one of a half dozen in starting a new paper in a field already well occupied. It is now believed that he will settle in Chicago on his return from Europe, and will there try especially to reach the farmers of the Middle West with the weekly edition of whatever paper he controls. I think I know which paper it will be. As he is an earnest Republican from convictions and a forcetul writer, he may yet become the Horace Greeley of the West. If he does he will occupy a higher plane in regard to half the public at least than any Cabinet officer and most Presidents.

THE MEN WHO WEAR OUT.

THE MEN WHO WEAR OUT. Newspaper work is usually represented as very hard and wearing. As matter of fact it isn't and it is. It all depends upon the kind.

No work is easier and, on the whole, more healthful than that of the newsmore healthful than that of the newspaper free lance whose responsibility ends when his day's work is written, who keeps no office hours, sleeps care free unless he is a fool and earns a decent living. Such aman, or woman, certainly ought to live longer and more happily than the harassed merchant or lawyer.

But the work of the managers is simply killing. In every great newspaper ply killing. In every great newspaper office the managing editor, the city editor and the night editor have work so hard, and responsibility so constant, that they wear out very rapidly. It's a standing maxim in journalism that a Herald night editor lasts six months. The managing editor lasts a little longer. The city editor of the Even-ing Sun frequently eats breakfast at 4 o'clock in the afternoon after his work is entirely completed for the day. John C. Reid's retirement from the managing editorship of the Recorder was forced by his broken health. He was for years managing editor of the Times, left it for his health, went to Paris, London and California for relief. ventured back to New York and stood it for a little over a month. He is not an old man, but looks a feeble one, with his bent head, stooping shoulders, tall, gaunt frame and seamy face.

I have known of a woman who, thrown into a place of responsibility in which assistance was not immediately obtainable, worked at her desk from 9 o'clock in the morning thin 2 or 1 ac night, with brief intervals for snatch-ing food, not for one week but for several in succession, turning out several columns of "copy" for each of the seven days of the week.

This is the pace that kills. THE BEAUTY SHOW

Twenty-third street, once a quiet residence thoroughfare well up town, is becoming one of the principal shop ping quarters of the city, much of the life and bustle of Broadway flowing into it both to east and west. Back of Twenty-third street, naturally, is Twenty-second, which is as quiet as the other is noisy and crowded with crowds of shoppers and pavement hucksters. For all that, the knowing ones locate on Twenty-second street one of the beauty shows of the city. Many of the great shopping stores run through the block and have at the rear a modest entrance for carriage patrons where their coachmen can await their pleasure without being in the way of horse-cars. Here, by watching long enough—I never did it; it doesn't seem worth while—one can see the most famous women of the city step-ping quietly into their carriages to be most ramous women of the city step-ping quietly into their carriages to be driven away—Mrs. Cleveland, Mrs. Whitney, the young Mrs. Astors and Vanderbilts, Hers, too, comes Mrs. Harrison on her shopping excursions. There are other beauty shows by daylight, Fifteenth street, near Tif-fany's and Twenty-sixth street pre-deal in New York.

If there were in New York any such struy of, dudes and mashers as pessimists would have us believe, these shows of beauty entering and leaving her created carriage would have many spectators. But they don't, as a rule. Meat of the people whom I see appear to be minding their own business pretty successfully.

THE STORY OF A NEW YORK HOUSE.

There is a cartain house more Sixth.

There is a certain house upon Sixth avenue which turns its gloomy brownstene side to the roar and rattle of stene side to the toan which thunder by, the elevated trains which thunder by, It is high, like all New York houses, It is high, like all New York houses, but a low extension juts out in the rear, and a few feet back of that a sickly, stunted tree rises scarcely to its level. The New Yorker who is whirled past the house twice each working day never notices it, except at those times when he is piloting out some town guest. On such occasions, as he leaves the atation at Twenty-third street, bound down town, he begins to peer out to the left, and presently he says: "See that house there; the one with the extension? That's where broker Hatch met his death. You remember reading about it in the papers. The woman Scoville, or Scotleid, or one with the extension? That's where broker Hatch met his death. You re-member reading about it in the papers. The woman Scoville, or Scotleld, or whatever was her name, lured him in there, and then, when caught, he ran there, and then, when eaught, he ran out on the extension roof and jumped for the tree, missed it, and fell flat on the flagstones. Splendid family, too; I knew him well." And the visitor cranes his neck also to see the gloomy old place as he goes rattling by.

Few things five longer in the memory than a scandal. Probably the story of that house will not be forgotten until long after it is pulled down.

NOSES AND SARS.

NOSES AND EARS. Since Chauncey M. Depew and I had our noses operated upon for cataarh the operation has suddenly become very fashionable. The theory of the operation is delightfully simple. Cataarh, say the nose surgeons, is usually taarh, say the nose surgeons, is usually caused by stoppage of the masal passage by thickening of the membrane within until there is not a free channel for respiration. The remedy is to current obstinate lumps of cartilage with an arrangement of wire and pincers, and to burn away swollen obstructions with acid—which isn't especially painful if occasing is used as a local painful if cocoaine is used as a loca painful if cocoaine is used as a local anosthetic. The doctors say that not one nose in three is even in tolerably good shape naturally in this country, and that the general health is always improved by this treatment.

The ear is another organ which is quite common to have specially treated nowadays. I am speaking of menand particularly of men who use the telephone a great deal. There can be little doubt that the common use of this exasperating and much sworn at convenience has a marked tendency to convenience has a marked tendency to increase deafness. It is noted in most cases which come to the specialists for treatment that the ear which is most used at the telephone receiver is in the worst condition.

There is no doubt that men and women live longer and enjoy, on the whole, better health than ever before, but they certainly do have a lot of trouble with their noses, teeth, ears, eyes and digestions.

WOMEN AND DOGS. The great St. Bernard dog, which was the delight of Mrs. Howard Carroll's life, is no more, and great is her roll's life, is no more, and great is her-sorrow at his taking off.

No, I am not going to preach over his big carcass a sermon on the neglect of babies and the petting of dogs by New York women. There has been, perhaps, enough of such talk. Mrs. Carroll, at least, having two or three extremely nice children exceptionally well looked after, to whose happiness the dog was more necessary than to the dog was more necessary than to hers, would not point a moral, would she, though otherwise available for such gossip as the daughter of one wealthy man, John H. Starin, and wife of another?

In spite of all that has been said the dog subject it is probable that the love of the mother more readily finds room for pets than that of the child-less. I always expect to find children and dogs thriving together and am seldom disappointed. As for cats and parrots, they do not count, AFRICA IN NEW YORK.

There is a bicycle store down on Warren Street which displays upon one of its walls about as fine a collection of the heads of game animals as has often been mounted. These are the spoils of Thomas Stevens's East African expedition, and the unfortunate animals furnishing them are all said to have had the bad luck to see Stevens when he had his gun. The biggest head is that of a two-horned rhinoceros, and after it in the order of size come the mounted heads of an eland, a zebra, a mpalla, a granti— some of these names are a little wobsome of these names are a little wob-bly in my memory—springboks twe or three, gazelles, oryxes "and many others," as the society reporter says. The prettiest thing in the lot, though, is the stuffed crown crane, which is complete from its long, scaly legs to its head crowned with a crest of slender, hair-like feathers, and with brilliant red cheeks. All in all they are a very decorative lot and I don't wonder Mr. Stevens is rather inclined to be proud of them.

to be proud of them. BOY $3; BURDEN $40. On a street car bound uptown a boy approached the conductor, treading carefully, a big bundle of unusual shape in his hand. Won't you please stop the car?" he said. It is usual for boys, bearing bundles or otherwise, to jump off cars while they are at full speed, and there was a look of inquiry in the conductor's eyes, to which the boy vouch-safed this explanation: "They's fruit and flowers worth $40 in it, and I mustn't smash.'m."

"And Learn $11.0 a. week by weeking."

"And I earn $14 a week by working Sundays," said the conductor in an awestruck tone.
"And I earn $3 a week," said the boy, as he steered his cautious course for the sidewalk. The conductor fol-lowed him with his eyes until a building hid the precious burden. But his only comment was, "Fare please!"

PICTURES AND BEEFSTEAKS. This has been a very disastrous season for artists. The first day of the Academy, which usually sells $10,000 worth of pictures, took in only $2900. The little Salmagundi exhibition where very beautiful work was shown at un usually low prices by artists of repute, sold only seven exhibits out of 129. At least, that was the number up to the time of my visit, next day but the last, and no more sales were expected.

The plain fact of the matter is that

And just so soon as a young artist gets a few words of praise from the newsa few words of praise from the newspapers he expects $500 or $1000 for every picture he does. That is a good deal of money, and will buy a large number of very excellent beefsteaks and rubber coats.

THE BASERALL SEASON.

The games thus far played in the League championship baseball series seem to show pretty ragged playing on seem to show pretty ragged playing on the diamond, but the public interest has unquestionably revived, and the knowing ones are now looking for a great baseball year. The attendance is good for so early in the season, and will be better as the days grow warmer and work slackens up for the summer. Theater managers always begin to look melancholy when the baseball season opens, and to the "popular price" men in particular it is little less than a calamity.

Growth of Urban Population.

The increase in the country's urban population is a significant fact, shown as one of the results of the census. The percentage of the people who dwell in cities in the United States is now 29.12, while in 1880 it was 22.57. It is also pointed out that in the course of the century the proportion has creat of the century the proportion has crept of the century the proportion has crept up from 3.35 per cent. to the present figure. At the present rate, in about two decades more half of the popula-tion will be city dwellers. The im-portance of bending our energies to the betterment of our methods of muni-cipal administration is therefore con-spicuously evident.

EVENT OF THE MONTH OF MAY

Something About This Erratic Member of the Solar System -Why It is Interesting to Scientists.

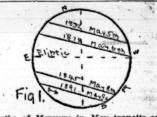

Astronomers have taken much interest in the transit of Mercury, which phenomenon occurred on the 9th inst. Every instrument known to science was brought out and trained upon that portion of the heavens where the celestial performance was given. Scientists on this Coast were allowed a longer time for observing the passage than were their eastern brethren, and had ample opportunity to note the transit. The time of internal and external contact, together with the duration of the passage, can be seen by reference to

George A. Hill, of the United States Naval Observatory, in Washington, writes upon this subject in the San Francisco Call, and says that the first view by man of this flery god was obtained on the morning of the 19th of the Egyptian month Troth, answering to November 15 in the year 265 before

The accompanying diagram gives an idea of the form of the wanderer, showing him as a crescent. Though much in size than the moon, Mercury's distance from the earth and the bright glare from the sun by which he is gen-erally surrounded all go to rob him of much clearness of outline. When usually seen this celestial racehorse is mor or less crescent-shaped—about as the moon appears when passing from the new to the first quarter.

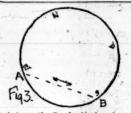

Mercury is composed, like the earth and other planets, of material that does not possess the powerlof self-illumination; consequently when the planet is viewed from the earth we are unable to discount the possible to the possible unable to discern the non-lituminated side, and the crescent is simply due to the foreshortened view we have of the illuminated side.

The popular mind will inquire of what real value to science is a transit of Mercury. We reply by saying that observations of the phenomena add more facts to those already in the pos-session of Evidence, the presiding offsession of Evidence, the presiding officer to whom we appeal for an explana-tion of the physical construction of Mercury, of the possibility of an at-mosphere and why it is that theory and observation of the planet's move-ment do not satisfy each other.

If the planet is surrounded by an at-mosphere a transit offers the best opportunity of noting its extent and form. Again, while the transit is in progress the side of the planet toward the earth will be destitute of sunlight and its

Another very important question is the possible vari-ation of the siderial day. These are the principal points about which astronomers are seeking information from data derived from a transit of Morcury. In the solar system there are only two planets that can, as seen from the earth, transit the sun's face. The two planets that fulfill these conditions are Mercury and Venus. Transits of Mercury always occur in the months of May or November, happening at intervals of 13, 7, 10, 3, 10, etc., years. In Figure 1 the circle is intended to represent the sun's disk. The heavy lines indicate the path of Mercury in each May transit during the present century. Just above each line will be found the year and day of the transit. The one we observed on May The one we observed on May 9 is the last of the May transits that occurs in this century. A November transit, and the last until 1907, will happen November 10, 1394.

Transit of Mercury, November 5, 1868.

A sketch of the transit of Mercury of November 5, 1868, plainly shows these two phenomena, and it is reproduced here. It was drawn just before the planet passed over the sun's face. A view is also given of the planet on the sun's limb, showing the distorted image of Mercury, a condition that astronomers dread, and the cause for which there are any number of theories.

Many eyes peered through telescopes on this occasion to see the transit. The diagram marked figure 3 shows the sun to appear to move toward the east and north. Combining these two motions the path of Mercury across the sun's disk will be that shown by the dotted line and in the direction indicated by the arrow.

GENERAL SHERMAN'S DESIGN. The Simple Monument He Selected to Mark His Grave.

Work has begun on the monument Work has begun on the monument which was designed by Gen. Sherman himself to mark his grave in Calvary Cemetery in St. Louis. A few weeks before his death Gen. Sherman explained his views as to a proper monument to mark his grave. A drawing was prepared, and after it was somewhat modified according to suggestions made by the General, he accepted it, saying he would place it among his saying he would place it among his

The design as approved by Gen. Sherman is here produced. The monument is to be made of what is known as fine hammered Westerly statuary granite of light color. It will be four feet eight inches by three feet eight inches at the base and nine feet six inches high, and made in three sections. It is to stand beside the granite cross which Gen. There will be no ornamention of the monument except on its front. Near the top his well-known gold and silver combination badge will be represented. It consists of a gold pin, from which is suspended a ribbon in the national colors. This ribbon supports an arrow from which a triangle is suspended. To the triangle a gold shield is attached with an acorn pendant. On the center of the shield is a star with a cartridge-box engraved on its center. The arrow, triangle, shield, star, cartridge-box and acorn are each the emblem of one of the army corps with which Gen. Sherman was

THE GILA MONSTER.

The Chicago Idea of the Pet of the Arizona Plains.
Recently a specimen of one of the nost repulsive-looking reptiles on earth was exhibited in a Los Angeles window, and though it was not far from home the creature attracted much attention. The gila monster, as it is known on its native heath, would attract attention in a crowd, if only for its extreme ugliness, though it has the reputation of being a most dangerous dealer of poison and an undesirable acquaintance in many respects. The technical name for the reptile is helioderma horridum, but that is no im provement on its Arizona title.

One of the creatures is now a resident of Chicago, and a paper of that city says about him that the animal is about sixteen inches in length and of genuine Falstaffian girth. The skin is covered completely with bean-shaped

I called at a lovely home one morning not long ago. It was the home of wealth, of culture and true refinement. The mother is a noble woman, one who moves in the fashionable world, and who is a great society favorite. Her sweetness and her gentleness win her friends everywhere, and with these characteristics is coupled an independence of thought, and clearness of perception such as secure for her respect as well as admiration. Her standard of right is high. She is no mere devotee of fashion, though well fitted for a leader among the most cultured and refined. She has a daughter, a lovely young lady, one of the fairest of our "four hundred," and I can say nothing more complimentary to her than that she is a second edition of her mother—a 'bright, sparkling, vivacious young characteristics is coupled an independa bright, sparkling, vivacious young lady, who has the courage of her convictions, and who will never be a slave to folly.

"Do you go to the reception tomorrow?" inquired her calie."

"No, for I am just disgusted with fashionable society, and mamma and I will stay at home."

"Why, you dear little butterfly, what is the matter?" exclaimed her friend, who had called to have a chat with her about society affairs.

"Matter, Nell! I feel that it is all sham and deceit when I see some of our best people accepting invitations from those for whom I know they have not a particle of respect. Has society reached that point that it doesn't matter whether a man or a woman has any moral standing or not if only they are au fait in fashionable usages and requirements? I am disgusted with the lack of moral courage that so many society people show, and with the countenance which they give to those of well-known questionable reputation, while they profess to look with scorn upon a like lack of principle if they find it in the common walks of life. Such morality does not count. Vice is vice wherever you find it, and you cannot cover it up or excuse it, or soften it by money or position, and be true to the principle of right."

"Oh, you do rave so, dear, when you right.

"Ob, you do rave so, dear, when you get on these themes," said Nell.

"What is the use of inquiring into a person's antecedents if they know how to entertain delightfully, and we can go and meet our most charming society people at their homes? We are not afraid that they will not behave themselves for the time being, and that is enough."

"Oh, Nell! Nell! do you really feel like that?" said the other, earnestly.

"Do you not care anything for right be-cause it is right? Don't you prize virtue for virtue's sake? Can you give cordial countenance to people who are not good and pure, simply because they happen to belong to our set? I tell you, Nell, it shames me to see the lack of true prin-ciple which we exhibit. It shames me to see individuals holding their places in fashionable circles whose course has been such that it has invited scandal and just censure. Our fashionable world feebly protests against such conand just censure. Our fashionable world feebly protests against such conduct, but it accepts their invitations and goes to see them all the same. It does not matter if they have broken hearts and desolated homes, their receptions are just as welcome to us, and we greet them just as cordially and respectfully as if just as cordially and respectfully as if their souls were white and their lives pure. I tell you, I am tired of it, Nell, and I am happy that mamma feels just as I do."

"You were always so very queer about these things," laughed Nell "Then you think it queer for me to call things by their right names; to make a distinction between right and wrong, and dare to show disapproval of the wrong even in our own society circles, do you?" said my friend's daughter.

"Oh, I do not believe in making ourselves uncomfortable about these things. It will make us unpopular if we notice them, you know."

"I think this fear of unpopularity is just the secret of our moral cowardice in this matter. We do not like to offend our doar four hundred. We do not feel willing to let fashionable Madam Grundy set us down as differ-ent from the rest of society in these and ring-streaked.

A MYSTERIOUS MURDER.

Apparently Causeless Assassination of an Indiana Woman.

Lawrence county, Ind., and all the adjacent region is greatly excited over the mysterious murder of Mrs. Solomon Neideffer during the brief absence of her husband. In the mor-

Robbery could not have been the motive, for the family kept no money in the house and had nothing to tempt the most desperant and noming to tempt the most desper-ate. And there was only the slightest evi-dence that any assault had been attempted; and, further, all the surroundings indicated that there had been no struggle. The poor woman had probably been killed without warning.

Is it a Whitechapel case—one of semi-maniacal thirst for blood? The location of the house is such that one could enter or leave it directly from or into a dense forest in the rear, and get several miles away be-fore crossing any public road. Twenty-five witnesses were examined with great mi-nuteness at the inquest, and yet the murder of Mrs. Neideffer remains a seemingly unexplicable mystery.

The Mystery of a Murder on Staten Island.

A CORPSE FOUND BY A SAILOR.

It Is Thought to Be That of Carl Ruttinger, Who Came to America with William Wright-The Latter a Suicide or Fugitive.

Europeans have made America notorious as the scene of some of their most infamous crimes, or as the land to which they have fled in evasion of justice. It was at St. Louis that the Maxwell-Preller horror took place, and in a Canadian swamp and a Canadian jail yard occurred the life takings of the Birchall-Benwell tragedy. It was New York that a Copenhagen merchant shipped the body of his victim packed in a

In due season the trunk mystery of St. Louis, the swamp mystery of Canada, the barrel mystery of New York, and the mystery of the New Orleans bandit's identity were solved; and as in those cases the American officials showed their competence and intelligence, it is only reasonable to expect that in curse. it is only reasonable to expect that in course, of time they will arrive at the facts in what must yet be termed the Staten Island mys-As in three of the other affairs men

As nearly as could be established, the death of the Staten Island victim occurred on a day in February about tweive hours previous to the suicide at the Astor House in New York city of a person who had gegistered as Fred Evans, and who left among his effects no clew to his identity or relatives. The Astor House case was for a time something of a sensation because of the queer attempts at identification made by a lawyor, an actress and a real estate dealer. The next thing essayed by the officials was a discovery of the rea-sons for the murder and suicide. Ruttinsons for the marker and suicide. Ruttinger, it was learned, had been a lace manufacturer in Germany, and had married a sister of William Wright in England. The couple quarreled and separated. Wright sided with his brother-in-law, and with him sailed for America. The German had plenty of money, the Englishman had none, and because of this a theory was SUPPOSED PICTURE OF WILLIAM WRIGHT. evolved that Wright had killed Ruttinger evolved that Wright had killed Ruttinger and then, horrified by the enormity of his crime, had taken his own life. But opposed to this was the fact that Ruttinger was tall, stoutly built and powerful, while Wright was small and delicate in physique, almost to effeminacy. The authorities now are engaged in the investigation of new clews which, if they amount to anything, are expected to show that the body found near Tottenville is not that of Ruttinger at all, but of a sailor named tinger at all, but of a sailor named Schneider.

They have also been informed that within the last few days a man answering Wright's description in every respect was seen at a hotel in Rochester, N. H. So it will be seen that they are confronted with a remarkable series of complications. If the bodies now on hand prove to be those of Wright and Ruttinger, the question to be solved is that of the reason for the murkey and the series of be solved is that of the reason for the mur-der and suicide. However, if it should tran-spire that the German and the Englishman are still alive, it will be the duty of the officials to ascertain how Ruttinger's pa-pers chanced to be in the pockets of the Staten Island victim, and why it is that Wright has made no effort to elucidate the mystery of the affair. ORGANIZATION NECESSARY.

One Fault of Road Construction Is Ina-bility to Fix Blame for Bad Work, Good roads are almost universal in Great Britain and on the continent. It is well to bear in mind in connection with the deficiencies of American roads that they are caused not so much by a want of knowledge of how to build a road as they are by lack of organization looking to systematic work. Our country and state organizations are not of such a character as to properly carry forward road improvements. There is an improper division of responsibility in that there is no adequate means of locating neglect or ignorance when bad results appear. A country or state organ-ization which has charge of such improvements is, according to the common methods of organization in America, responsible to no one but itself. If a board of county commissioners appro-priates a sum of money to build a road, lets its own contracts, and through its own officers approves and pays for the work, it has no one to blame but itself in case of wrong doing, either from neg-lect or intent. One does not correct himself for misdeeds. If we, as individuals, make a mistake we merely acknowledge it and go on to something else, or we do the work over again. A board of county commissioners does not correct itself. If it builds a bad piece of road and pays for it it does not hold itself responsible, nor does it hold itself responsible for neglect of a good road. This, by the way, is a of a good road. This, by the way, is a wrong more heinous and more often perpetrated than neglect in the construction of new work. There should be a different division of responsibility in work done in this way. The body which legislates should be separate and distinct from that which percent the entity. from that which executes, then criticism would be natural and possible.

If one direct his servant to do a piece of work he is more liable to critici exact proper performance than if he were personally responsible only in the expenditure of some one else's money. This involves the best and highest principle, which has now come to be considered as the proper one looking to a higher grade of public performance. It calls for an organization according to the general scheme which is attached to any large business. There is the general head of the establishment. This executive lays out the work to be done by his subordinates, and holds them responsible for proper results. This is the way that public affairs must be managed to bring about a higher success.

The general form of government which applies in Great Britain and on the Continent has the merit of holding all its officials personally responsible for work done under their charge. It brings about a realization of responsibility, and, to that extent, good work. It makes the difference between an organization and none at all. We cannot expect faithful performance of public trust without holding some one responsible for the character of work done. We hold our officials responsible only for the money which they spend. We say to them, "You must show to your taxpayers where the money went, what you paid it for and for what service." We do not go far enough and say, hold you not only responsible for the money paid out, but we hold you responsible for the results of that expenditure." It is not sufficient to say, "You must show vouchers and affidavits indicating where the money went, but you must also show that the money was well used." This is quite as important as the spending of the money. A board of county commissioners would receive a report from a board of road commissioners that a certain road be built. As the general representatives of the people the board of county commissioners investigates and issues an order for its building and maintenance. The road commissioners then have the matter in charge. They are responsible to the county commissioners for the results. They select the best road they can within the limits of a reasonable ex-penditure. They take bids and award the contract. They are careful to have a good contract because of their responsibility. This in turn leads the contractor to realize his responsibility, because in case of his failure to do the right thing he is almost certain to be detected on account of the enforced vigilance of the road commissioners. Thus the contractor looks after his work more carefully and holds his men responsible for what they do. The line of responsibility is con-

When it comes to paying for the work, those who issue the order approving that already done will be exceedingly careful if they know it is a matter of personal responsibility with them. The whole thing operates on a theory that it is a good deal easier to find fault with some one else's work than with our own. county commissioners can say to the road commissioners, if their road turns out badly, you are at fault in this matter. The road commissioners can loce to the man the cause of the trouble, and in case of fixed responsibility the work can be made right by those at fault. However, through this system the faults are frequent, because each one interested is protecting himself through the character of the work that is being done.

This is the theory on which foreign governments are now carrying on all of their internal improvements. I have mentioned county commissioners and road commissioners. This designation is used merely for illustrative purposes though the principle applies whatever may be the designation of the officials.

Here are three cases that may be sot down as new proofs of the old adage that "truth is stranger than fiction."

Until recently, George A. Elwood was a prisoner at the Columbus (O.) penitentiary. He had been sent there in 1885 from Lucas county on a ten years' sentence for burglary and larceny. His reputation was that of a daring and daugerous criminal. Because of his courtly address and choice use of language he was known as "Gentleman George." His "pals" also called him "the Silver King." as he had a decided weakness for breaking into houses from which silverware could be purioined. In the prison he displayed all the enforced virtues of a model convict, and soon gained the confidence and even sympathy of his the confidence and even sympathy of his guards. The other Sunday morning he was excused from attending religious ser-vices and directed to answer sick call.

At noon he failed to appear at the dinner table, and as he hadn't been seen in the hos-pital an alarm was given and an investiga-tion begun which showed that Elwood had ande one of the most daring escapes re-corded since the days of Baron Trenck. After taking from the open and empty cells a number of sheets, which he knotted together as a rope, he went to the top range, scaled the beams, reached the ventilator and through that gained access t the roof. Then he walked leisurely along the eaves for a distance of 200 feet to a sky light communicating with the warden's apartments. Descending through this he entered a bedroom, discarded his convict garb, put on a suit of citizen's clothes, strolled into the yard and walked out of the gate, nodding pleasantly to the guard

The escape of Charles Myers is fully as sensational as that of Elwood, but Myers owes his liberty not to his own efforts but to those of a lawyer who made a jury be-lieve that his client was crazy. The aclieve that his client was crazy. The ac-cused, in company with a boy named John Bogard, wandered into the depot at Inde-pendence, Mo., on the night of Jan. 1, 1888.

"That man has money," said Bogard.

The two stole out, got a coupling pin and returned. Myers smashed Weir's skull with three fierce blows. The assassins rifled the body of their victim and ded. Bogard leaves the bit has been seen field. fled. Bogard sought his home near Independence, and Myers, who was an ex-sol-dier, went to Fort Leavenworth and re-en-listed in the military band. The murder dier, went to Fort Leavenworth and re-en-listed in the military band. The murder was a brutal one, characterized by no criminal eleverness. The only astonishing feature is the result in the courts. In dire season both the cowardly fiends were ar-rested. They had separate trials, and Bogard was given a life sentence, which he is now undergoing. Myers' case was called recently, and his attorney, Frank M. Lowe, set up the lunacy plea with entire success. When the jury announced the verdict of "not guilty," Lowe cried "Thank Godl" and fell from his chair in an apoplectic and fell from his chair in an apoptectic fit. Myers, as one of the people in the court room remarked, "Never batted an eye." On the first trials both the scoandrels were sentenced to death. Bogard's punishment was commuted to life imprisonment on account of his youth, he being onment on account of his youth, he being but sixteen years of age. in Wiggins' arrest for embezzlement. He Erthal. The girl's father traced them to St. Louis, and they were taken to police headquartors. After a stormy scene the that Wiggins be released. This was agreed him, as her evidence is regarded as being of importance for the prosecution.

No one who knew Hansbrough when ne was in San Francisco twelve years ago ever dreamed he would fetch up in the United States senate. Hansbrough filled the telegraph editor's desk on The Chronicle for m Chronicle for many months, and he was a rattling good editor of news, besides a rattling good editor of news, besides being an expert on head writing. At that time the newspapers here got only a light telegraphic service, because the overland wires were in poor condition and the rates extremely heavy. Proba-bly 5,000 words a night was an average report. Under these conditions it was necessary to add any descriptive matter

Once, when Alexander II made a wholesale sweep of a lot of nihilists, shooting several and exiling the remain-der to Siberia, Hansbrough headed the rather lurid report of Russian imperial cruelty as "Czar-Saparilla!" Work at a desk, however, proved too monotonous for Hansbrough, and finally, in 1879, he conceived the idea of taking an educated Chinese to the east on a lecture trip. Hansbrough hired Hull, the most accomplished newspaper "fakir" on the coast, who made Denis Kearney famous by writing his sand lot speeches, to prepare the lecture, and it was a very entertain-

The east didn't bite as Hansbrough expected, and the lecture outfit went to pieces somewhere between Chicago and New York. Then Hansbrough went to Iowa and started a paper. When the Dakota boom started he saw his opportunity, and now he is reaping the fruits of it. He may not know as much about law or parliamentary procedure as many other senators, but there are few in that body who have more general information than Hansbrough.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

According to the testimony, Mrs. McKee some time ago borrowed money from Mrs. Wimpee and gave her note or from Mrs. Wimpee and gave her note or notes as security. These transactions were conducted without the knowledge of her husband, and it is claimed that Mrs. Wim-pee secured from Mr. McKee the cash she loaned to Mrs. McKee. ned to Mrs. McKee.

MR. AND MRS. M'KEE.

About the time the notes came due Mrs.
Wimpee fell ill after cating some peaches sent her by Mrs. McKee. The latter, in company with a Mrs. Deitz, attended the sick woman. One Friday Mrs. McKee left town, and Sunday Mrs. Wimpee died. Then Mrs. Deltz told of things that led her to believe that the deceased had been poi-soned. Detectives arrested Mrs. McKee in Florida and brought her back to Rome Florida and brought her back to Rome.

The trial proved highly sensational. It was swern to that Mrs. Wimpee had rejected two milk punches made for her by the defendant. These were thrown in a slop bucket, from which a cow afterward drank and then died. Arsenic was found in Mrs. Wimpee's stomach, and Mrs. McKee when on the stand admitted having beight rat poison on two separate occa-sions. Four notes were produced in court, three of which she declared were forgeries. They had been kept in a tin box, which Mrs. McKee was charged with trying to open while nursing her creditor. The evidence was voluminous, and as to details somewhat contradictory and confusing, so the jury returned a verdict of "not guilty."

Mrs. McKee is about twenty five years of age and fairly good looking. Mrs. Wimpee was fifteen years her senior.

It turned out, however, that in order to get the license he had to swear she was over eighteen, when in fact she was a year or two younger. So the judge thought the cheapest way out of it was to send him up for perjury, and it was done.

Feline Sagacity.

A very much petted cat of mine, aged ten, was with me while sewing recently. She had seated herself on a portion of the calico which was before me on a small table, and before leaving the room for a few minutes I carefully arranged the part of the work with the needle it so that it hung over the edge of the table and was well out of Tiny's way. On my return I found she had gathered up the calico and was sitting upon it, but had kept out the unfinished hem, and was holding down the needle with her right paw, purring loudly the while at what she evidently considered a successful imitation of her mistress.-London Spectator.

ething About the Building to Be Erected by Members of the Iron Hall in the Quaker City-Items from Other Secret Societies

Not long ago there was formed in Philalelphia "The Iron Hall building com-pany." The result of its work is shown in the completed plans of the structure pict-ared in this article, which will be erected n Philadelphia at an early date.

THE PROPOSED PHILADELPHIA BUILDING. The new building will be located on Broad street, above Arch, adjoining the Academy of Eine Arts, and will have a academy of Eine Arts, and will have a frontage on Broad street of 71 feet, run-aing back to a depth of 145. The com-pany proposes to erect on this lot a hand-tome seven story building, composed of gitrified brick, with brownstone settings. The structure will be in the Gothic style of architecture, and from the second story apward will be turreted, each turret being pet in brown cut stone. The pointed spexes of the upper turrets will tower high above all the buildings in the immediate ricinity, from which will float night and day a streamer, showing to the residents of this city a monument to the strength growth and stability of this order of the

The Corner Stone Laying of the New

The one absorbing topic among the Mas ons in the state of New York and in the lodges is the laying of the corner stone of the home and asylum at Utica in May next. The time has been fixed for Thursday, May 21. The M. W. grand master, Bro. John W. Vrooman, will officiate. M. W. past grand master, Bro. Frank R. Lawrence, who, by his wisdom and energy, made the laying of the corner stone at this time possible, will deliver the oration.
The R. W. grand secretary, Bro. E. M. L.
Ehlers, has charge of the arrangements of details and will be marshal of the day.

Reduced railroad fare will be secured from all parts of the state. It is expected that 50. 100 Masons will assemble on that occasion at Utica. It will be the grandest display ever ed at the laying of a corner stone and the most notable and important event in Masonic history. Lodges are consider-ing the feasibility of attending in a body. Districts are negotiating for special trains, and everybody has caught the contagion.

From the charitable to the needy is not a far cry when the Odd Fellows act as public crier to the cause. Less than two months ago the Odd Fellows' association of Illinois decided that an orphans' home should be built and suitably furnished. The city of built and suitably furnished. The city of Lincoln, Ills., donated forty acres of land to the association for building purposes. Plans for the projected home were submit-ted to the board of directors and approved by them. The main building to be con-structed will cost from $22,000 to $25,000, and the further room required will be pro-vided for by buildings erected on the cottage plan. The corner stone will be Talla the third Thursday in May with due and proper ceremonies, the order throughout the state participating therein. It is expected to have the central building complete and ready for occupancy prior to the next session of the grand lodge of Odd Fellows, which will meet in November.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE YOUNG WOMAN WHO COMPOSES.

A Fad in Corsets That Costs Money Secret of Real Beauty—A Woman of the writer was in no sense famous until Business Ability—Parisian Fancies—A all at once the hour struck and fame was hers. No longer ago than last spring a Bussian Reception.

It is most remarkable that though music is part of the education of most women, and with all their aptitude for the art and ability in interpretation, the sex has never produced a great com-poser, and comparatively few compositions that have attained any great popularity. Miss French, a young Irishwoman living in Paris, is an exception and another is Miss Hope Temple, a young Englishwoman. The most popu-lar of her compositions is entitled "Memories," which is a song of great depth of feeling. It is a pretty glimpse that we have of Miss Temple's childhood when we hear of her living near Dover, where the gallant ill starred Twenty-fourth regiment was quartered.
She loved the soldiers, and they, one and all, loved her and treated her as a little daughter of the regiment. Her very first composition was a waltz for the band to play, and as she taught it to them herself we may be sure that full justice was done to the young conductor and her melody. It was a great sorrow to her that this idyllic episode was followed by the grim realities of war, and that the disastrous battl field of Isandhlwana, in Zululand, was the grave of nearly all the brave men who used to salute her so gayly when she went in and out among them. She had little musical education, and always hated the piano as an instrument, but success in song writing has caused her to advance step by step. She is at wo-Philadelphia Press. She is at work on an operetta.

A Fad in Corsets That Costs Money. A recent bride distanced all of her contemporaries in the value of one item of her trousseau, and it is said by her friends that she thereby set a fashion that must henceforth be followed by all brides of any pretensions in the world of society. While it is, of course, the rule for the expectant wife to have her bridal corsets made far more elaborately and expensively than has been her former custom, often having them embroidered most delicately, it is declared that this instance is the first where gold was used in the place of steel, both for the clasps, the evelets and the lacing tips.

The few intimate friends of the bride who were permitted to gaze upon the mysterious portion of her outfit had their attention called to this feature of the beautiful corsets, and they say that examination showed the metal portions to be composed of gold as described.

One young woman had the temerity to ask what the advantage of gold was, and she was informed that it did not discolor and was in every way preferable to steel. It was generally agreed that the idea was an awfully clever one, but at the same time it was regretted that the world at large would not know about the gold. No one dared to ask however, was $100 a pair, and the bride had three pairs, one in white, another in pale blue and the third in black of New York Sun.

And so she saves the delicate and precious stones for her finger rings, shippers and belts, and has the oriental beads and ornaments of china, metal and pebbl about her face, hair and throat.-New York World.

Parisian Fancies,

Some present Parisian fancies should be described, if only to emphasize their silliness. It is gravely announced that Scotch terriers are the fashion of the moment, because their color accords with the caprice for gray gowns for spring wear. The dog has a bit of scar let ribbon on his collar, and thus, when he is abroad with his mistress, the bit of color she would not wear gives the needed effect to the gray tones

It is also stated that a language of stamps, which it is important should be understood, prevails in Parisian society. The stamp placed exactly in the middle ding, while one placed at the left hand corner is encouragement, as the flower symbols say. It might be added that any deviation from the proper and ac-cepted upper right hand corner means folly on the part of the sender and in-convenience to postal officials. But fash ion eschews such considerations.— Point of View in New York Times.

The Price of Wisdom There is nothing stranger to youth than the persistency with which age proffers its experience; there is nothing more trying to age than the determination of youth not to accept it. The fathers. mothers and guardians who have learne their hard lessons would be glad to impart their knowledge, without its ruin-ous price, to those they love. But the

> POULTRY. Dying in the Shells,

When chicks die in the shells there is a loss of both eggs and chicks. When eggs from immature pullets are used, or eggs from inbred stock, or from stock in which the male or the hens are lacking in some essential, there will be loss of chicks during insubation. One of the mustakes usually cubation. One of the mistakes usually made is in supposing that eggs must have moisture; that is, the eggs must be in the presence of damp earth, or resting on it. The eggs under hens are therefore sprinkled, while pans of water are kept in incubators to supply moisture. Recent experiments show that during incubation the moisture (water) in the egg is rapidly given off, and near the end of a hatch tests show a very large air space at the large end of the egg. The chick does not fill this space, but seems packed in the egg lower down. When too much moisture is given the chick grows more than it should, and becomes too large to remain in the egg and not sufficiently developed to come out. The conclusion is that no moisture is necessary for incubation unless in extremely dry locations, and then not so much with a view of supplying moisture as to premoisture. Recent experiments show view of supplying moisture as to pre-vent too much evaporation from the

THE SWEET POET'S BIRTHPLACE

His Boyhood's School, and His Famous Home at Bydall Mount Limned by a Loving Hand.

ICOPYRIGHT, 1891-SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

GRASMERE, England, April 28.-Just as the present century was coming in, Words-worth, the then political extremist and budding poet, with his sister Dorothy— one of the grandest types of those women one of the grandest types of those women whose resistless sympathy and encouragement are of more benefit to the world than the blatant pretensions of all the female "ists" that ever were born, or ever will be bern, into it—returned to the English lake region, the land of their birth, and it remained their home until their death.

I tramped over the fell from Keswick to Cockernouth the noiset will less in which Cockermouth, the ancient village in which, in 1777, the poet was born. The grand scenery of the region lies in every direction in endless change along the winding way. To the east, Helvellyn and Skiddaw, huge and dark, are continually presenting new forms of majesty and color, or hiding in mysterious beauty behind the fleeting veilmysterious beauty behind the fleeting ven-ings of tender passing clouds. One or an-other of the lakes, Derwentwater, Butter-mere, Crummock Water, Ennerdale Water, Lowes Water or Bassenthwaite Water, is Lowes Water or Bassenthwaite Water, is never absent from view, and from the height of lordly Grassmoor, as from the peaks of Skiddaw and Helvellyn, the entire lake district could again be surveyed and feasted upon. Cockermouth itself is but one of the many quaint old Cumbrian villages, which seem as ancient and mossy as the rocks out of which they were hewn. It is a sweet, dim, dreamful and songful old spot, for the Derwent river sweeps melodiously by, and the Cocker river, from which the village derives its name, is emptied into the Derwent at the village side. Wordsworth's father, John Wordsworth, was an attorney here, and law agent side. Wordsworth's father, John Words-worth, was an attorney here, and law agent to Sir James Lowther, afterward the Earl of Lonsdale, who requited his services by forcibly borrowing the earnings of his life-time, £5,000, which sum, years after the death of both the earl and his victim, was which is shut off by a massive stone wall with wide coping and monumental projections at regular intervals and the corners. In the area between the street wall and the house are several pertly trimmed shade trees, and the ample garden in the rear extends to the banks of the lovely Derweot.

Hawkshead, where the lad Wordsworth passed his first years of school life, is in the most northern part of Lancaster, where that shire pushes up into the southern reach of the lake region. It lies midway between the queen of the English lakes, Windermere, and Coniston Water, near which may be found the home of John Ruskin, and nestles prettily beside the beautiful Esthwaite Water. It is by far the most antique village of the lake country—as Gibson oddly sang; while its yew trees, under which many of Wordsworth's earlier as Gibson oddly sang; while its yew trees, under which many of Wordsworth's earlier verses were written, are quite as majestic and far more beautiful than the famous yews of Borrowdale. The old schoolhouse is standing just as Wordsworth left it. It is noted in literature as the "Grammar School of Hawkshead," and its "Rules," in the handwriting of Archbishop Sandy, of York, who founded the school in 1855, may still be seen. It is no more than a tiny stone dungeon, with wide, low windows, a single broad, low door, and a whitewashed schoolroom interior, where a tall man would be in danger of thumping the ceiling beams with his head. The schoolboy, Wordsworth, cut his name into his desk, and the scarred old plank is accordingly prized as a precious relic. Every one will remember the good dame, Anne Tyson, with whom Wordsworth-lived, and who was so much a mother to him during his was so much a mother to him during his boyhood's days at Hawkshead. Her cot-tage is still standing; and "The snow white church upon the hill," made famous in the "Prelude," stands as then in a near field. Around it the sheep and lambs are grazing. But the old life went out of Hawkshead with the handlooms; you will never find a half score of worshipers at service within it; and the incumbency is so reduced that the village to his youthtide haunts at Hawkshead. Scenically their surroundings would seem to prompt the same, equally with the more central lake region upon which his highest genius was expended. While all the lake regionis, properly speaking, Wordsworth's loved resort. This is Easdale. It is one of land, the interest and feeling of the thoughtful traveler seem to parcel the district into two almost equally fascinating topographical and literary divisions—the northern and southern; though both of these are central. These are very pare ages these are central. These are very near each other in miles, and tenderly near in associative interest. The northern district is topographically dominated by Skiddaw. Saddleback and Grassmoor. It possesses topographically dominated by Skiddaw, Saddleback and Grassmoor. It possesses the beautiful lakes of Bassenthwaite, Derwent, Ullswater and Thirlmere; it has Keswick town for a central point from which to seek its scenic splendors; while as a distant area it seems sacred to the memories of Coleridge, Shelley and Southey. The southern, and, all things considered, perhaps the sunnier and more exquisite of the two, is overshadowed by the mountain monarch of the whole lake region, Helvellyn, by High street, by Sea Fell and Bow Fell, and by Coniston Old Man (from the old British ald maen—hill of stone). The entrancing lakes of Coniston, of stone). The entrancing lakes of Coniston, Windermere, Bydal and Grasmere silver its noble dales and vales; in the hamlets of Bowness, Ambleside, Rydal and Grasmere cluster its sweet old Cumbrian homes, and their neighborhood is chiefly rife with memories of Martineau, Hemans, Arnold, "Christopher North," DeQuincey and Werdsworth. The latter first intended to build his home at Applethwaite, on How Gill, a lovely spot on the southern slope of Skiddaw, within sight of Southey's Grota Hall and Keswick, and within hearing of the chimes of old Crossthwaite church. The land was Reswick, and within hearing of the chimes of old Crossthwaite church. The land was a gift to him from Sir George Beaumont, of Colerton, and still remains the property of his descendants. But on his permanent return to the lake region he made the ancient village of Grasmere his home. This hamlet is on the main cocker road, traversing from north to south the central and most beautiful portions of the lake district, most beautiful portions of the lake district, and is but three miles from rayau and nove from Ambleside, which lie to the south. Here he resided for thirteen years—first at Dove Cottage, afterward occupied by DeQuincey, and now forming a portion of the outbuildings of a busy inn; next in a roomier but less comfortable house at Allan Bank, and again in the parsonage of the ancient Grasmere church. In 1813 the Wordsworths removed to Rydal Mount, where the poet remained until his death in 1850, having uninterruptedly lived within a three miles radius of where he now lies in Grasmere churchyard for upward of fifty years.

right and east would attract your attention. From the inclosures on either side huge beech trees and sycamores push tremendous arms across the walls and completely cover the way. It is as shadowy as twilight here. You will not have passed a score of rods up this high arched nature's riste until the sounds from the highway—the rumbling of the stages, the laughter of gay tourists, and even the notes of the coach horns—are stilled. In summer the place is thronged with birds. Even these irreverent choristers seem as if subdued and ruminative here. In autumn your fect sink in feathery masses of pale golden right and east would attract your attensink in feathery masses of pale golden leaves. It seems a long time that you have been traversing these few rous; all is so hushed and still. Ascending a little farther there is a break in the foliage to your right. Some huge gates are seen. A lodge ther there is a break in the foliage to your right. Some huge gates are seen. A lodge stands just beyond, and suddenly the splendid facades of Rydal Hall, the seat of the Le Flemings, appear above the luxuriant shrubbery of its splendid park. Higher still you climb, and where the dark roadway seems to make a final circle over the brow of the hill to the left you pause to listen. Something like low and hesitant organ notes seems murmuring in minor chords, while a gay and joyous treble plays in exultant tones above. Ah! you remem-ber. These are the voices of the two cas-cades of Rydal. Their songs were sung to cades of Rydal. Their songs were sung to one poet for forty happy years.

A step farther, and the bright sunshine seems to leap along and through the tree tops, impatient to flood its effulgence upon one little spot. On that spot stands an ivy covered old house, two stories in height, with all manner of angles and patches; with huge chimneys and wondrous gables; with windows cut here and there at random, or pushed outward in bows and bays; with doors entering as though made for convenience and not appearance, and the whole with a general air of having been done at different periods by various masters, each of whom labored leisurely in fend and whimsical mood. In front is the mastera, each of whom labored leisurely in fond and whimsical mood. In front is the tiniest of grass mounds, and wide steps of rough hewn stone lead this way and that, as if to invisible entrances; but as you see all—grass mound, steps, half disclosed terraces, and the mansion itself facing the south squarely—there was never a more winsome picture set in framing of laurel, yew, beech and fir; and never will you see another, home where the very spirit of another home where the very spirit of peace seems so embodied in outward ma-terial things, giving rapt and radiant welcome to the endless threnodies of waters and throbbings of a loving sun.

This is Rydal Mount, the former home of Wordsworth. Rydal Water, to the north, and the long, dreamful reach of Windermere can be seen from the grass mound in mere can be seen from the grass mound in the little inclosure. From every upper window, mountain, valley and lake smile back from glorious perspective upon the beholder. With the poet's long, happy and fruitful life at Rydal every reader of English literature is familiar. But it seems togme a precious thing for the wanderer here to identify and become acquainted with Wordsworth's best loyed hunnts. Two lines of road, with innumerable pony and lines of road, with innumerable pony and footpath deflections into all manner of sublime or witching scenes, knew him best, just as around the two villages and lakes of Rydal and Grasmere the memories of the poet are most thickly strewn. One of these roads is the great central highway of the lake region, and winds all the way from Bowness through the villages of Windermere, Rydal and Grasmere, over-weird Dunmail Raise, past huge Helvellyn over into Keswick, where Coleridge and Shellow were. The other is the travel and Shelley were. The other is the grand old road from Ambleside northeasterly, past the roar of Stock Ghyll Force, through the roar of Stock Ghyll Force, through Kirkstone Pass to Patterdale, Grisdale, Glenridding and all the glorious fells and glens that lie along somber Ullswater between the heart of the lake region and the ancient town of Penrith. Probably the personal enjoyment of the poet was greater along the former way, although the territory beyond Kirkstone, particularly around the head of Ullswater, furnished by far the greater number of poetic allusions.

The vale of St. John, at the foot of Helvellyn, was a never ending feast to him.

Thirlmere, to which the city of Manchester has tunneled for what will prove the finest water supply in the world, and against the consummation of which Mr. Ruskin, with more regard for long and bitterly, was an almost constant haunt. Here Wordsworth, in company with his wife and his sister Dorothy, almost daily came in summer. In the earlier days Coleridge would come over from Keswick and meet the three friends from Grasmere. The ladies brought their sewing and lunch, and the two poets furnished the soul am-brosia. Commemorative of these golden hours the poets had their names cut upon the Rock of Names at Thirlmere, and it was to this rock that Wordsworth ad-which calls the dim old folk who remain to this all but deserted shrine.

No fear of that; but the great walls Manchester is building at the lower end of to this all but deserted shrine.

For some unaccountable reason, but little of Wordsworth's poetical devotion was given to his birth spot, Cockermouth, or to his youthtide haunts at Hawkshead.

Thirlmere, to increase its depth, will cause the Rock of Names to be permanently substituted in the Rock of Names to b tern haunted, shadowy tarn, which is dis-charged through the foaming Sour Milk Ghyll not a mile from the highway of Grasmere. Wordsworth loved to claim Easdale as all his own, and he was jealous of intrusion here. When residing at Gras-mere, a half hour's walk would enable him to penetrate its depths; and he so grew to the place that when he had removed to Rydal, three miles to the south, nearly every day, rain or shine, found him seekevery day, rain or shine, found him seek-ing the companionship of its tender soli-tudes. The loftiest passages of the "Excur-sion" were written here; and it was the very essence of the poet's life to brood by Easdale tarn, with an intensity of passion, on those images of nature which his noble fancy brought from near and afar, and molded into fadeless forms for the measureless world of poetic thought.

KNOWLEDGE OF ANCIENT HISTORY HELPED OUT MINERS.

They Followed the Example Set by Cyrus the Great When He Captured Babylon. A Few Tons of Silver Ore Instead of a City Was at Stake, However.

There were gathered in the lobby of the Windsor hotel a number of engineers and mining superintendents. As is frequently the case, there was a good deal of talk of shop. Among the num-ber present were men who had been working, at one time or another, in h ly every prominent silver camp in the United States. The climax, however, was reached when one of the mining showed how a knowledge of an cient history once came into play and paid a man exceedingly well.
"Of course," he said, "you have all heard of the Pelican and the Dives mines at Georgetown, and know that there has been very rich ore taken from these claims. There was a dispute between the owners of the claims. The Dives used to keep its ore and have it all sampled Sunday. The idea was that no civil pro-cess could be served Sunday, and by getting the ore down and sampled that day there was no chance for their opponents to do anything. Of course, after the ore was sampled, no one could swear to its identity when removed from the sampler, and so it was safe the rest of the

"The Dives people aimed to ship down about 100 tons each Sunday, this amount of ore being valued at about $50,000. Mr. Schneider, the banker, who was afterward shot, was the owner of the Pelican and was anxious to get even with the Dives people in any way possi-

OBTAINED THE KEGS.

"The miner with whom the arrangement had been made had for some time had some low grade ore in sacks in one of the bins of the Foster sampler, a mill about half a mile above the sampler where the ore of the Dives people sampled. One evening, after he had made arrangements with a couple of friends, he went to Mr. Foster, after the latter had locked up his sampler, and asked him for the key of the mill, as he wanted to get the sacks holding the low grade ore stacked in the mill. Mr. Fosgrade ore stacked in the mill.

"During the night there came along a wagon loaded with ore picked out at the Dives mine by one who knew the grade of the ore. It was dropped on the and the two men packed the ore in the Foster sampler. The ore was put in the sacks which formerly held the low grade galena ore. It was impossible to away the ore that night, so it was left, with the hope that Mr. Foster would not notice anything out of the way. But when the next night it was noticed by the two conspirators that a brand new lock was placed on the door of the mill, and that all the windows had been firmly fastened down, they needed no one to tell them that Mr. Foster wanted an explanation of how worthless galena ore and suddenly become ore running 500 ounces in silver.

EVON FROM OF HISTORY "Here came in the advantage of reading. Says the one to the other. 'Have you ever read any ancient history?' 'No,' was the reply, 'and what good would it be here? Well, if you had, you would know how to solve the problem of enter-ing this mill without breaking it. Cyrus entered Babylon by turning the river that flowed beneath the walls of the city and entered by the way thus opened. We must do the same with the water running through the flume entering the mill, and thus enter without breaking through the wall or through the roof.

"It wasn't much of a job to turn the water of the flume at the headgate, and in a few minutes the flume was dry. Here was a good pathway leading into the mill, and nothing needed to be broken or in any way injured.

"It wasn't very long before our two conspirators were in the mill and were moving the sacks with the rich ore, about which Mr. Foster was so particular and anxious to learn something

The time at command did not allow "The time at command did not allow of carrying the ore entirely away. Not only that, but it was not safe to handle just that class of ore immediately, for, at the least, it meant a cutting of a good deal of the profit of the job. Here again the flume and its supply of water came in handy. The sacks with the ore were dropped over the tail flume, and as soon as the water was turned on there was a veil of water hiding all that wealth hidden behind it.

A NEW DEPARTURE.

Society loves to be amused and entertained, and surely Los Angeles does not fall behind other cities of he size in this respect. Our festivals and carnivals are a delight to beauty-loving hearts, and all the world and his are sure to attend them and go home pleased.

But we are soon to have something of a new departure from these.

The ladies of the Auxiliary Y. M. C.

A. are surely contriving by one effective way and another to make Goiden Hair and the Three Bears a notable society event. Three Bears" will be a comedy sensation, while the rare beauty of the in tableaux and chorus, espe cisily in the fullaby and coronal scenes, surpasses expression. Soci cannot fail to be delighted with it.

A DINNER PARTY.

One of the prettiest of dinner parties was the pink dinner given by Miss G. Dewey Friday. The house was profusely decorated with pink roses, and in the dining-room above the table were suspended solid ropes of the pink beauties. The chief decoration of the table was an immense block of ice with pink roses and smilax enciosed. Over this pink-shaded lights were thrown making a very beautiful appearance. The dinner consisted of twelve courses. and the menu was printed on pink satin. Covers were laid for ten, and with the exception of a promi-ment Chicago banker, and in whose honor the duner was given.

SCHOTTE-DORWARD.

On Friday evening of last week, at the Broad way Methodist Church, Frank Schotte and Mrs. Hattie Dorward, were united in marriage by Rev. Dr. Cantine, in the presence of a few relatives and friends. Mr. Schotte is a popular Government employé, in the railway service. Mrs. Schotte, who is well and favorably known in society circles, is an accomplished lady. The happy couple have started on a wedding tour to Ohio, where they will visit the home of Mr. Schotte's parents. They expect to return to Los Angeles within a month, and make their home here, where a host of friends wish them every success in life.

A PARTY ON GEORGIA BELL STREET. party was given by Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Hoaly at their home on Georgia Bell street, in honor of Mrs. Healy's birthday. The house was a bower of flowers, sweetly scented with the blossoms of the orange, rose and heliotrope, the dainty evening dresses worn by the On last Thursday evening an elegant

The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Barker, Mr. and Mrs. Eckstrom, Mr. and, Mrs. Stanter, Mr. and Mrs. Strassburg, Mr. Stanter, Mr. and Mrs. Strassburg, Mr. and Mrs. Bently, Mr. and Mrs. Penning, Mr. and Mrs. Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. Flint, Mr. and Mrs. Heid, Mr. and Mrs. Hartzell, Mr. and Mrs. Teale, Mr. and Mrs. Erarto, Mr. and Mrs. Cox, Mrs. Horton, Erminie Prouty, Mr. Krebs, Mr. McDonald, Mr. Westbrook.

MRS. MITCHELL'S FERN PARTY. Some days ago the friends of Mrs. John W. Mitchell received a neat and unique invitation to what was termed a "Fern Party," to be held in Laurel Cañon yesterday, and symbolic of the character of the entertainment was fastened in each corner of the invita-tion a spray of maiden-hair ferns. The fern party came off yesterday, and proved as original and unique as the character of the invitation had prom-ised. The Hollenbeck four-in-hand, in charge of Mr. Mitchell, started early yesterday morning and gathered from different parts of the city the guests about twenty-five in number — and drove thence by Lomita, Mrs. Matchell's country home, through the Cahuenga Valley along the "frostless foothulis" to Laurel Cañon. The rendezvous was about three miles from the mouth of the cañon, in a most charming spot, amid a profusion of ferns and wild flowers. And here, under a grove of oaks Mrs. Mitchell, who had preceded the party and assisted by Miss Clara Bush of Columbus, Ind., received the guest Luncheon was received the guest. Luncheon was found waiting and was spread upon the occasion, and the wild wood had been converted into a veritable diningroom, wherein was served a luncheon as complete as though given at home. The decorations of the table were with ferus and beautifully effective. After luncheon the party climbed the mountain sides and gathered wild flowers and rare ferns, which were found in great abundance. Altogether, the oc-casion was a most novel and charming social event, and certainly a more beau-tiful spot could not be found for such tiful spot could not be found for such an entertainment. Among those present were: Mrs. Ogier, Mrs. Dr. J. S. Owens, Mrs. Dr. Graves, Mrs. Patrick, Mr. and Mrs. Carter. Mr. and Mrs. Mattman, Miss Holterhoff, Miss Neal, the Misses Bugbee, the Misses Carter, Miss Graves, Rev. Dr. Bugbee, A. Carter, J. Neal, T. Neal, Mr. Benjamin.

A SURPRISE PARTY. Thursday night Miss Rosa Kiser gave a surprise party in honor of her brothers Bert and Willie Kiser and a most pleasant evening was spent. Among the guests were: Misses Anna Among the guests were: Misses Anna Dufton. Come on! Let's fly to some woodland haunt, Spend life as a marry jest! Where languid-lipped lilies their gold tongue

We'll away for peace and rest.

Peace to the senses, rest for the soul-With you as my merry companion, We'll follow the course where the rushing rivers roll Adown through the mountain cañon.

We will listen to its babble, all its rush of To its deep delicious trilling

To its cool and sooth ng murmur, as its rip-pling way is wound The dense sweet slieuce filling.

and we'll float on in fancy, away, far away, Over he misty mountain tops! Where dewy blue-belis dangle in the depths. we will stray

From da .-dawn till the setting sun drops. Roaming free as the west-wind, blithe as bird As we draw near the sunset's portals I'll lead you a race where the schoes ar stirred By elfins, but never by mortals.

With never a doubt we'll sail 'way out On the blue sky-waves alloat With clouds for sails and starlight about, And a moonbeam for a boat, Then chase away dull care for a day

Then chase away dull care for a cry
While down in this summer land
That smiles, with the warmth of the sun beam's ray,
By paim and fig leaves fanned.

MODEST MR. HAWKINS.

How He Decorated His Statuary and Had His Fun.

I was living in Los Angeles county ome time in the '70's, and encountered there the queerest form of this variety of modesty, writes a correspondent of the Oakland Tribune. There was a cow-man named Hawkins, who had made a fortune in Montana and came to Los Angeles county to spend it. People there called him crazy—mainly, perhaps, because he spent his money in ways which they did not understand If there were evidence that he himself understood those ways any better than his neighbors, one might disagree with them as to his sanity, but, unfortunately, the evidence is the unfortunately, the evidence is the other way. That he created a beautiful place was due to the accident that he employed a landscape gardener of the first class. Consequently he had a fine conservatory, well laid-out grounds, and some valuable statuary in the appropriate places. The gentle-man was frequently drunk, and this, indeed, was the only amusement he really enjoyed—a fact which might have been sufficient to redeem his inhave been sufficient to redeem his intellectual reputation in the eyes of his neighbors had it not been that their thrifty souls could not abide the waste of money on grass plate and winding roads and glass houses and such. One day, however, he came home with more drink than have and as it had been running he usual, and as it had been raining be concluded that the aude figures needed some kind of covering. He procured some colored paint and put a black India rubber coat on the Cupids. Next he fixed Apollo with a flaming red shirt and green stockings, Mercury was enveloped in blue tights and a bright red nose, Venus was rigged out with black stockings and a yellow gown; the other figures also came in for a share of decoration. Whether this was from a sense of modesty or of humanity or a

this was from a sense of modesty or of humanity or a plain, ordinary, vulgar drunk you may determine to suit yourself. Hawkins and his wife, a lady of very similar tastes and eccentricities, were both good shots, and he amused him-self in cowboy fashion by shoeting off the ear of Apollo and plugging Mercurv in the eye, until after an unusually hilarious time the statuary was maimed enough to have gone into the British museum as respectable an tiques, alongside of the Elgin wife warned him that she would shoot him if he undertook it. Hawkins plunged in, when bang went Mrs. Hawkins's Winchester. He hid be-hind the tank-house, and every time he showed his head a bullet whizzed past. His playful wife kept him shivering there the entire afternoon. His reservoir, which cost several thousand lollars, was ruined by his haste to use it before it was dry, but money was no object with him. Fun, he said was all he lived for, and as his one idea of fun was a skinful of whisky, he died of delirium tremens.

An Exploded Idea. [American Cultivator.] The souring of milk in thunder storms has just received a scientific explanation at the hands of an Italian savant, Prof. Tolomei. He has found that the passage of an electric current directly through milk, so far from souring it, actually keeps it sweet, so that it does not turn until sweet, so that it does not turn intil the sixth day; when, however, an elec-tric current is passed over the surface of milk it soon becomes sour, and this the professor attributes to the genera-tion of ozone, since the souring is more rapid when the current passes silently than when it is discharged explosively, more ozone being generated by the

A TRIP TO CHILE.

For ten days past the daily newsapers have been printing long accounts of the movements of the little American schooner Robert and and Minnie, which was hovering about the island of Catalina, as well as the great Chilean ship Itata, which lay for a time last week upon the quiet waters of the harbor of San Diego. These two vessels were upon our coast in order to obtain supplies of various kinds to carry back to the country from which the Icata came. These supplies. as is now well known, were for the use of the insurgents of Chile, who are fighting against the government of President Balmaceda.
We read that the schooner Robert and Minnie was loaded with rifles and other munitions of war, and that the Itata bought cattle, sheep and thou-sands of pounds of dressed meat and hundreds of tons of coal in San Diego.

All this is very interesting to us, and we feel that we would like to learn all about these strange skips in our great waters; and when the telegraphic dispatches begin to talk about there being a lot of Chilean soldiers on board the Telegraphic dispatches. the Itata, and about the big cannon and the little cannon that were placed on deck, and of the "one hundred Chileans all armed to the teeth, each having a repeating rifle and a revolver, and dressed in a uniform consisting of a red cap and jacket," we begin to feel as if we would like to know what all this means, and my girls and boys, I am sure, are thinking that they would not object to a geography lesson if it would throw any more light upon these natters, and make them understand tuily just where Chile is, and what kind of people live there, and what they are fighting about among hemselves.

Weil, my dears, I am glad to see you interested in the matter, and I think that we can very easily come to a pretty good understanding in relation to it.
In the first place, Cuile is a country on the western coast of South America.
Extending along its eastern boundary are the Andes Mountains, the second highest range of mountains in the world, while on the west of it is the Pacific Ocean, the same great ocean that washes our own shores and cradles the beautiful is and of Catalina, and fills with its bright waters the harbors of San Pedro and San Diego. Bolivia is the country just to the north of Chile and, like Chile, it is a free and independent republic.

Chile is a pretty big country—in one direction, from north to south, extending from the buy of Mejillones to Cape Horn, a distance of 2270 miles. But it is not wide between the mountains and the sea. In some places it is 200 miles wide; at other points, where the great mountain range approaches the ocean it is only about forty miles in width. The country has three or four million inhabitants, many of whom are employed in its rich mines, as well as in agricultural pursuits.

It is a wonderfully beautiful and picturesque country, with its fertile valleys and high table lands, and lofty mountain peaks, among which are many volcances, twenty-three, I think, altogether. The highest of these is Acancagua, which is 22,427 feet high, losing uself in the clouds, and its rest covered with eternal snow.

There is one thing that we should miss if we were to visit Chile, and that s the good roads which we have in our own country, and the strong, safe bridges which span our streams, for there only narrow paths extend over the mountain ways, and the streams are crossed on narrow rope bridges. If we wished to visit any place be-yond the mountains in Chile, we would have to ride upon the back of a mule, or, sitting in a chair, be borne upon the back of an Indian carried through the mountain passes and across the slender rope bridges.

while I think of it I will tell you that off the coast of Chile, about 360 miles from the main land, is the interesting Island of Juan Fernandez, where the story of Robinson Crusoe had its scene. It is an island on which there are many beautiful forests. some mountains, and on it great herds of goats live and flourish.

Chile has in some portions a very pleasant climate, divided like that of California, into two seasons, the wet and the dry, but its wetseason comes in the summer when it is our dry in the summer when it is our dry season, and when our winter rains come it is dry there.

The present constitution of the republic of Chile was adopted May 25, 1833, but Chile had achieved its independence many years before, in 1817, when it three off the yoke of its early conquerors, the Summards, who had conquerors, the Spaniards, who had ruled it in a cruel and tyrannical manbranches, the legislative, the executive and the judicial. All the citizens of the republic are permitted to vote when they are 21 years of age if they are married, but if they are not married they have to wait until they ried they have to wait until they are 25.

The people of Chile are mostly Catholics, yet there are some Protestants in the country, and the government does not interfere with people on account of their religion, which shows a spirit of liberality such as is always to be found among free and truly such to be found among free and truly enlightened peoples.

Chile has many schools supported by the government, and it is said that in the whole population of the republic one in seven can read and one in eight can both read and write. Then Chile does not forget the necessity of news-papers, and there are one or more does not lorget the necessity of newspapers, and there are one or more daily newspapers in every town of importance in the republic. Then, like us, she has her weekly papers and her monthly magazines for the people to read. She sends abroad for many books, and imports large numbers from the United States, and England, and France, and Germany and other gountries, for in Chile may be found people from all lands, although the Chileans themselves hold the same relation to Spain that we of the United States do toward England, and the prevailing language of the country is Spanish. But the flour mills, the telegraphs and the railroads of the country have all been built by the people who have gone to them from this country. So you see that our civilization is reaching everywhere, and it is helping the whole world, and I think it will not be so very long before South America will become as great and as progressive as is the great North American continent in which we live. I hope we shall live to see the new international railroad built that has been taked of, which shall link us with all of the rapublic of South America. of the republics of South America.

Then, when they have daily intercourse with us they will grow more rapidly in the love of freedom and in the knowldge of its institutions.

Here is a map which will show you the course you would take if you were going to set sail at San Francisco for Chile. If you study it I think you will feel that you have learned a good deal of the land in which we have all become so interested since the Robert and Minnie and the steemenin Lists and Minn'e and the steament put into our waters.

The map shows the Pacific Coast line from San Francisco to the limits of Patagonia. The sailing distance from San Francisco to Valparaiso, the principal scaport of Chile, is more than the principal scaport of Chile. principal seaport of Chile, is more than 5000 miles, and from San Diego about

This map will show you the general course to be taken by the Chilean steamer which has just escaped from the grasp of the American officers who were ordered by our Government to seize her for violation of the neutrality laws. This means that it was unlawful for a ship sent out by people in insur-rection against a government with which the United States is at peace (that is, Chile,) to come into American waters and ports to take on war sup-

If the escaping vessel should be pursued by the great United States man-of-war Charleston, which set sail from San Francisco only yesterday, May 9, the course of the pursuer will be generally the same as that of the fleeing ship, whose destination is one of the Chilean ports which you see marked on the map. And if our war vessel overtakes the Chilean merchantman or comes up with the insurgent war ship Esmer-alda, there may be a great naval battle off the Chilean coast.

LAY SERMONS.

"Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and the widows in their afflictions, and to keep himself unspotted from the world.'

This language of the apostle James has certainly no uncertain ring to it. It is a positive statement. It is the blessed gospel of humanity, a religion for every day use and practice, one that leads the disciple of Christ into the byways where sorrow sits and where the widow and the fatherless mourn. It takes the Christian away from worldly pleasures, and teaches him the language of sympathy. It suggests helpfulness and generosity and that feeling of humanity which places us at touch with the race. It reveals to us that great truth, which we are sometimes apt to forget, that religion comprehends something more than the mere endeavor to secare our own individual preaching Christianity in this way, well-being and salvation—it means work for others, care for their physical Father is this, to visit the fatherless as well as their spiritual needs.

I would not advise any Christian to go to a poor, toiling, weary, hungry man, whose pockets were empty and whose children were crying for bread and set out to labor for his spiritual salvation while the cries of his hungry ones were ringing in his ears and while he looked with hopeles eves and discouraged heart into a poverty-stricken future. The bost gospel for the Christion to preach to such an one at the outset would be the gospel of bread and butter, plenty of food and plenty of raiment for himself and family Find a good, practical text to fit his case in the silver and the gold that you take from your purse and put into his hands, till he is able to fill the famished mouths and the hungry stomachs and of self-sacrifice. It leads its fol-lowers wherever there is want and suffering and sorrow. It touches their words with tenderness and sympathy, and they say 'we give you this for the Master's sake.' "

Ah, what a love is that which can reach down through almost nineteen hundred years and still pene-trate and warm the hearts of men. It must be divine and enduring. It must be satisfying. It must make men better and holier. There would be no more poverty if the world were only filled with this doctrine of love and helpfulness. "I must look into it," he would say; "and if possible have the full benefit of all that it can give me."

Then he would say to him who had helped him, as he began to talk of Christian hope and faith. "Tell me all about it. It is something which I feel that I need; something that will help me to bear the burdens of this life, and which will give me something to look forward to when I lay them down. You talk of eternal life into which none of the trials of this life shall enter. That is something that I want; it is glorious, and the hard battles that I have fought here with discouragement and poverty will help me to enjoy and appreciate such a life a great deal better than I could have done if I had not passed through so many trials and disappointments; but thanks to your Christian help, I am on my feet again, and standing on solid ground now, and with the pleasant atmosphere of your sympathy about me, I really believe I begin to perceive God's goodness to me in all that I have passed through. It would have been hard for me te understand the spirit of Christianity if I had not seen it illustrated in his children, and if I had been always prospered I might have thought that this world was good enough for me, and so never have given a thought to any other. I begin to see that our trials here are disciplinary, and for our good, and that they teach us lessons of trust and faith, out of which glorious hopes are born that are better than any that this world can give us.'

Would not the Christian who could win a man to talk like this through the gospel of helpfulness, feel that this was a good way to preach the gospel of eternal life? Surely he would, and he would find, moreover, that it was the shortest way to the door of his faith as well as to the love of his heart.

well as to the love of his heart.
We, as Christians, ought to preach Christ's gospel by this method more generally than we do. "The poor ye have with you always," said the Master, and these poor are, a great many of them, God's own children—those who shall be "kings and priests with God" by and by. Shall these royal heirs to a heavenly inheritance be left to suffer hafore they come into their etternal inheritance? "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Shall we hold back our hands from giving to Christ? Shall we fail to see Him in the poor and hungry and naked, and sorrowing?

to see Him in the poor and analysis naked, and sorrowing?

Oh, blessed ministry, which He permits us! "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me." And here are the needy ones all about us. In a little tenement room at No. 513‡ Spring street, in this city, is one of his followers, whose feet have gone down to the borders of Jordan. He is down to the borders of Jordan. He is poor and penniless, and the blessing which comes with this "inasmuch" may be ours by helping him. But he is not the only one in our midst. Christ's needy ones may be found in many a back alley and shaded court of this city. Let us search them out and help them, and let us try the effect of help them, and let us try the effect of and the widows in their affliction. to keep himself unspotted from the world."

Weeds in the Apiary.
[Rural Californian.]
The true beekeeper will prevent the growth of grass and weeds in the growth of grass and weeds in the apiary. It gives the place a slovenly appearance to see weeds amongst hives, but aside from the appearances the grass and weeds make the ground cold and damp just at the season when the hive should be kept warm so as to facilitate the rearing of young bees, but aside from this a greater reason exists for keeping the apiary absolutely clean of such growth. After they have matured they become so dry in this locality that they furnish kindling for fires in the apiary, often to its entire destruction. We have never known an apiary to be destroyed by fire where grass and weeds are kept out of it. There is yet another good ished mouths and the hungrystomachs of his dependent ones, and face the future with fresh courage.

To you think there would be any trouble in getting his ear after this had been done, while you talked to him of the love of Christ and the hopes of the life to come? "No," he would say, "there is something in a religion that sends the stranger to me to supply the wants of my family and to help me in my misfortune. Infidelity doesn't search for the grown pin weeds.
